MELLON CASE OF TAX FRAUD IS DISMISSED

DECISION REACHED 3 MONTHS AFTER HIS DEATH

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon won today, three months after his death, formal exoneration of income tax fraud.

The United States board of tax appeals threw out the government's fraud charge unanimously and in a divided opinion on other issues slashed the government's claim for additional taxes on Mellon's 1931 income from $3,075,103 to about $700,000. The 125-page decision was so complicated, however, that it may be several days before the exact amount is determined. It took the board a year to make the decision.

Branded as Tax Dodger

Both sides considered appealing the decision to the circuit court of appeals, but the ruling brought to at least a temporary end one of the most sensational controversies between New Dealers and their predecessors. The government accused Mellon of dodging taxes and he branded the charges "political persecution."

Mellon, a shy industrial and financial titan from Pittsburgh, first came to general public notice when President Harding named him secretary of the treasury in 1921. He continued to manage the nation's finances under Coolidge and Hoover until in 1932 Hoover sent him to London as ambassador. The advent of the New Deal retired him to private life. The tax quarrel began a year later.

Donated Art Gallery

The administration filed the huge claim and sought a criminal fraud prosecution. But a Pittsburgh grand jury refused to indict him and today's ruling supported that decision.

Eighty-two years old and in failing health, Mellon spent his last few months donating a $50,000,000 gallery of art masterpieces to the government. He died on August 26, just before construction of the gallery was started at a site about three blocks from the capitol.

Acclaiming the board ruling as a "victory," Donald O. Shepard, executor of Mellon's estate, said, "We deeply regret that he did not live to read the repudiation of that (fraud) charge."

During the six-month trial of the tax claim, Mellon acknowledged that in 1931, while he was tax collector-in-chief of the United States, he sold certain stocks at a loss to reduce his taxes. The government contended this was illegal but the board declared today that the transactions were both valid and proper.

Saved $2,700,000

"So far as the tax saving motive was concerned, petitioner had full sanction of the law," the board said.

"The law on this question is clear. (Quoting an old supreme court decision) 'Anyone may so arrange his affairs that his taxes shall be as low as possible; he is not bound to choose a pattern which will best pay the treasury; there is not even a patriotic duty

PRIEST OF AIR TO WRITE AGAIN

Father Coughlin's Paper May Be Returned to Him Soon

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—Perrin Schwartz, executive editor of social justice, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's former newspaper, said today that Father Coughlin would resume writing for the publication in addition to returning to the radio.

The newspaper was sold to Walter Baertschi, of Toledo, coincident with cancellation last October of plans for the radio priest's return to the air in a winter series of broadcast sermons and comments on current events.

Schwartz said that Father Coughlin would resume his writings with the Christmas issue of the paper. He said it was planned to turn the paper back to its priest-founder when its circulation "reaches a million". The circulation now is claimed to be 600,000. In Royal Oak today, Baertschi said he would return the paper to Father Coughlin whenever he wanted it.

Archdiocesan officials said Archbishop Edward Mooney had no comment to make on the latest developments which started when the high prelate rebuked the Royal Oak priest for criticism of President Roosevelt.

Soo Locks Tonnage Breaks All Records During 1937 Season

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 7 (AP)—Isaac de Young, general superintendent of the St. Mary's Falls canal here, announced today that iron ore tonnage through the famed Soo Locks broke an all-time record in 1937.

The 1937 total was 65,575,278 tons. The previous record was 64,827,025 tons in 1929. The November tonnage this year of 1,583,752 tons boosted the 1937 total over the previous peak year by almost a mililon tons.

Total freight carried through the locks to Dec. 1 this year was 87,330,311 tons as compared to 69,528,600 last year and 92,622,017, the all-time peak, in 1929. Total wheat carried to Dec. 1 this year was 111,204,467 bushels.

Farmers May Get Permits To Shoot Deer Eating Crops

Lansing, Dec. 7. (AP)—A proposal that farmers be permitted to kill deer damaging their crops is to come before the state conservation commission Friday.

Conservation Director P. J. Hoffmaster said the farmer now is prohibited from killing the animals without a license during the regular hunting season, but has no redress from the state if the deer damage his crops.

The director predicted the commission, if it gave permission to kill deer that invade private property and cause damage, would require that the meat be given to charitable organizations.

Air Current Leads Man Out Of Mine, Trapped 41 Hours

Pinckneyville, Ill., Dec. 7 (AP)—A clean, sweet current of air, sweeping through a dank maze of tunnels, led 28-year-old Lawrence Lee to safety today after he had been lost in a coal mine for 41 hours.

The mine bookkeeper, who disappeared in the Briar Hill workings Sunday afternoon, had the presence of mind to follow the current until he reached an air shaft in an adjoining mine, one of several connected by a labyrinth of tunnels covering eight square miles.

Diggers coming to work heard his shouts from the bottom of the shaft. Lee, who had crawled in complete darkness most of the time he was underground, told his rescuers:

"I was pretty scared until I came across the current of fresh air. Then I knew I could follow it until I came to the air shaft."

"Fagged out," his clothing ripped and his legs torn and bleeding, the young bookkeeper was taken home and put to bed to rest. His wife and their small daughter had maintained a constant vigil at the mine entrance while rescue squads searched the rambling tunnels.

QUIZ OF NLRB ACTS BLOCKED

Editor Still Defiant; Freedom of Press Is Questioned

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—An administration leader blocked action today upon a proposal for a congressional investigation to determine whether the national labor relations board had violated the freedom of the press.

The proposal was advanced by Representative Thomas (R-NJ) after the board had subpoenaed Hartley W. Barclay, editor of "Mill and Factory" for questioning concerning an article he published.

Thomas asked that the house immediately authorize Speaker Bankhead to appoint a special investigating committee. But Representative Rayburn of Texas, the Democratic leader, objected that the proposal was not privileged and could not interrupt the scheduled order of business. It was laid aside when Speaker Bankhead upheld Rayburn's view.

The labor board remained silent tonight on any plans it may have to force Barclay, who has defied its subpoena, to testify in the board's investigation of Weirton Steel company labor policies.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP)—Arthur Davenport Black, 67, dean of the Northwestern university dental school, died at Swedish Covenant hospital tonight following a six months' illness.

Nanking Walls Stormed; Chinese Repulse Attack

Shanghai, Dec. 8 (Wednesday) (AP)—Chinese sources today reported Japanese columns storming two gateways of Nanking's ancient walls were repulsed by Chinese defenders who inflicted 1,000 Japanese casualties.

Three Japanese columns were said to be attacking the almost-surrounded capital in a semi-circle.

Chinese reports said the vanguard of one column advanced to the Chilin (Unicorn) gate of the outer walls but was driven back with heavy casualties.

A main motorized column next attacked the "morning sunshine" gateway in the southern main walls leading to the beautiful Ming palaces. Chinese defense forces were said to have staved off the attack and pushed the column back to the village of Tenghwachen.

The third column had not reached Nanking yet, being held up by fighting at Mulinkwan.

Chinese troops inside the barricaded city of Nanking, apparently convinced the capital would fall before the oncoming Japanese legions, today began destroying military supplies and equipment to keep them from being taken by the enemy.

Approximately 200,000 Chinese soldiers were massed in the vicinity of Nanking, objective of a force of 75,000 Japanese, whose advance guard was reported at the city gates attempting to scale the ancient walls.

Within the capital—deserted by the Chinese government—tension increased as the passing hours brought the crisis closer.

Thousands of civilians, including at last report 17 Americans and many other foreigners, massed in the residential area, which the Japanese said would not be attacked. All exists were closed.

Foreign battleships at Nanking reported the Yangtze river devoid of all craft which might afford a possible means of Chinese retreat to the north. The Japanese previously asserted they had blocked all roads on the south and east.

MURPHY CAN'T ATTEND RALLY

Attorney General Main Speaker at Meeting in Traverse City

Lansing, Dec. 7. (AP)—Governor Murphy said tonight that a minor cold and the press of business which piled up while he was in New York for a speaking engagement and conferences with federal officials might prevent him from participating in a ninth district Democratic rally at Traverse City tomorrow.

Automobiles and special trains will carry other Michigan Democrats to the meeting, at which Attorney General Raymond W. Starr will speak. Starr is the fourth member of the governor's official family to mount the rostrum in a state-wide series of pre-campaign meetings.

The attorney general has announced that he would discuss the state's war on gambling in delivering a mid-term accounting. Democratic officials predicted that 500 would hear him.

State Senator Earnest C. Brooks, Democrat, Holland, co-author of the administration's ill-fated welfare reorganization legislation, which has been tied up until next November by referendum petitions, may share the program with Starr.

Lapeer Home First On State Program

Lansing, Dec. 7. (AP)—The state hospital commission placed improvement of the Michigan Home and Training School at Lapeer as the No. 1 item on the institutional building program today.

Dr. Joseph E. Barrett, hospital director, said the commission considered conditions at Lapeer presented the state's most pressing problem because of overcrowding, lack of fire protection and the long waiting list of mental patients for whom there is no room at the hospital.

INSURGENT AIR BASE IS RAIDED

Heavy Damage Inflicted by Spanish Loyalist Bomb Squadron

Madrid, Dec. 7 (AP)—A successful raid by government planes on the island of Mallorca, insurgent air and sea base off the east Spanish coast, was announced tonight by the Barcelona government.

An air ministry communique said government squadrons inflicted heavy damage on Palma, Mallorcan city once famous as a Mediterranean resort.

The communique, terming Palma the base "where Italian resources predominate," reported three insurgent planes and one government craft were shot down in the air battle.

"All objectives fixed by our high command were successfully hit by our planes which dropped all their bombs and emptied their machinegun magazines," said the announcement.

WHITTAKER STRICKEN

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—Joseph H. Whittaker, 57, former vice president and general manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., died today after a heart attack.

SHIP BUILDING PROGRAM ALL SET TO START

MERCHANT MARINE TO SPEND ABOUT 20 MILLIONS

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The maritime commission, it was learndd authoritatively today, is ready to start within the next two weeks a multi-million dollar program for rehabilitating the American merchant marine.

An official said that "in a week or ten days" bids would be asked on about $20,000,000 worth of construction. This will include at least ten and probably a dozen 9,000-ton cargo vessels, costing about $1,750,000 each.

Suitable for War

The commission also has projected a tanker construction program in conjunction with ten oil companies, headed by Standard Oil of New Jersey. The companies are to bear the basic cost of the vessels, the government paying only for building into them such features as will make them suitable for naval auxiliaries in war-time.

In addition the commission is scheduled to ask in a day or so for bids on remodeling a government-owned vessel to be used as a training ship. The cost of this probably will be $400,000 to $500,000.

One On Subsidy

The officials said the cargo vessels would be built entirely for government account, unless one of the private, government-subsidized ships lines arranged to take over one. To date the commission has undertaken construction of only one vessel on a subsidy basis. It is a $15,750,000 passenger ship for the United States Lines, to be built by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock corporation of Newport News, Va.

Designs for the new cargo ships call for a speed of 15½ knots and they, like the tankers, will be designed for conversion into naval auxiliaries if needed.

May Mount Guns

Bids already submitted on the tankers provide for a speed of 16½ knots if the commission and navy approve the plans, as informed persons predict they will. Otherwise the tankers would have a normal commercial speed of 12½ knots and be built outright by the oil companies.

The national defense features proposed for these vessels include not only abnormal speed but also provisions for mounting guns, picking up airplanes from the surface of the sea and reflueling warships in the open sea.

WILSON CHOSEN AS AMBASSADOR

Assistant to Secretary of State Succeeds Dodd in Germany

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—Hugh R. Wilson, assistant secretary of state, will succeed William E. Dodd in the post of ambassador to Germany, informed persons predicted tonight.

(It was learned in Berlin that Dodd has resigned, effective next month.)

President Roosevelt and state department officials refused to confirm reports of the impending change. Other informants said, however, that such a move would provide opportunity for an improvement of relations between the United States and Germany, which have been distinctly cool.

Dodd, a former university professor, was appointed to the post in 1933 by President Roosevelt. His expressed opposition to dictatorship had prompted some Germans to say he was no longer acceptable as an envoy.

It is understood here that the 68-year-old educator intends to resume his chair of American history at the University of Chicago.

DETROIT NEGRO GETS 60 YEARS

White Woman Attacker Is Threatened With Mob Lynching

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—John S. Harris, 28-year old negro who was the near-victim of Michigan's first lynching attempt, was sentenced today to 50 to 60 years on a charge of rape.

The sentence was believed to be one of the heaviest ever imposed for the charge, and was considered more severe than a life sentence.

Harris pleaded guilty to a charge of attacking a white woman and police said he told them of attacks on two other white women. "The devil possesses me when I see a white woman," he was quoted as telling psychiatrists.

Judge Lester S. Moll, who imposed the sentence in circuit court, told Harris he wished to assure society that the rapist would remain in prison the remainder of his natural life.

Harris' life was threatened by a gang of 10 white men Nov. 2 when he was taken from jail to a justice court. Police said the crowd, armed with ropes and a five-gallon can of gasoline, included husbands of two of Harris' victims.

Russian Explorers Await Rescue From Ice Floe In Arctic

Moscow, Dec. 7 (AP)—Four Soviet explorers drifting from the North Pole toward the Atlantic indicated today they were ready to be rescued as their ice floe approached possible danger.

In the 200 days since they landed at the top of the world, the campers have floated 745 miles and today reached the position 82.23 degrees north and 6.52 degrees west — off northeast Greenland.

Otto Schmidt, bearded chief of the Soviet arctic ventures, has indicated the men may be taken off the ice in January, when it is estimated they will have reached a point between Greenland and Spitzbergen.

Ivan Papanin, chief of the camp, reported today by wireless that the campers "won't be ashamed to return to the mainland since we have collected much valuable data."

His companions are Peter Shirshoff, marine biologist, Eugene Fedoroff, magnetologist; and Ernest Krenkel, radio operator—all engaged in scientific studies in the polar region.

The pilot of the plane was not immediately identified. The boy victim was Leonard Albright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Albright. Leonard's three-year-old brother, Spencer, Jr., and Mrs. Albright, were injured.

The plane tore through the Albright house and the O. J. Herrington home next door.

CREATE THREE MILLION JOBS, SAYS DU PONT

INDUSTRIES READY FOR RECOVERY PROGRAM

New York, Dec. 6 (AP)—Creation of 3,000,000 new jobs, investment of $25,000,000,000 of capital in expansion of industry and a new recovery program over the next two to ten years were proposed to the nation's manufacturers today by Lammot du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Addressing the National Association of Manufacturers, meeting here in annual convention, Du Pont said such a program was "staggering in its size and complexity," but "neither hopeless nor impossible." To achieve it, he declared, government must give industry "a reasonable amount of certainty upon which it can count in planning current and future operations."

Ask Fair Opportunity

Earlier the 600 executives of American business had heard William B. Warner, president of the association, plead for teamwork between labor and capital, management and government and appeal to the latter for evidence of a "changed attitude toward business."

"The bulk of responsibility for future social betterment," Du Pont asserted, "should be placed on industry's shoulders. And industry accepts the responsibility. Even more, we welcome the responsibility with full confidence in our own and our nation's capacity to discharge it successfully. All that we ask is the same fair opportunity that we believe should be given the humblest citizen."

Business in Fog

New jobs, new wealth and agricultural prosperity, could be produced only through planned research, planned development and planned expansion of plant, sales and administrative facilities. That meant, he said, "planned expenditure of capital months and years in advance of any penny of return."

Describing business as blanketed by a "fog of uncertainty" over future taxes, labor conditions, inflation or deflation, possible new restrictions on capital and profits, Du Pont demanded:

"If industry is to be given the fair opportunity to work that it seeks, some definition should be given to what, to those of us in industry, would constitute a fair opportunity.

"My own thought may be summed up in a sentence: Give industry a reasonable degree of certainty upon which it can count in planning current and future operations."

Willing to Cooperate

To that end, he asserted, "the labor situation must be stabilized, x x x the legal rules under which industry must operate should be stabilized immediately," and business given "positive and reliable assurance that the complicated terms and conditions under which it must function are finally determined, subject only to an unmistakable public demand for their

POLICE WATCH AT FORD PLANT

Union Will Distribute Literature Today at Rouge Location

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—A dozen state police will act as "observers" tomorrow when the United Automobile Workers of America attempts to distribute union literature at the gates of the Ford Motor company's immense Rouge plant in defiance of a police order.

Oscar G. Olander, state police commissioner, said he had ordered Capt. Don Leonard, head of the Detroit office of the department, to be on hand with the officers. "I do not anticipate any trouble," he said.

Meanwhile, Larry S. Davidow, UAW attorney, said he would "seek the removal of John L. Carey as mayor of Dearborn if he persists in refusing the right to union members to distribute their newspaper" at the entrances to the plant.

Davidow said he had conferred with Gov. Frank Murphy by telephone and was prepared to "file a formal complaint with the governor asking the removal of Carey on grounds of official mis-conduct."

Dealers In Bottle Liquor Allowed To Run On Slow Time

Lansing, Dec. 7. (AP)—The state liquor control commission ruled today that packaged liquor dealers in communities that operate on Central Standard Time may adopt that time system for their business.

Upper Peninsula dealers located near the Wisconsin state line had complained their business was handicapped by the time difference. Central Standard Time is general in Wisconsin. Some Upper Peninsula municipalities, located near the obrder, operate on the slow time schedule, however.

The commission disciplined a number of lower peninsula licensees accused of having violated regulations. It deferred action in the case of the Club Tally-Ho, in Lansing. The commission is to confer with the club's board of directors before ruling on charges that beer and liquor were served to non-members of the club.

to increase one's taxes.'"

This section of the decision saved Mellon's estate more than $1,700,000 in taxes and about $1,000,000 in fraud penalties. The section involved primarily the sale of Pittsburgh Coal company stock to the Union Trust company of Pittsburgh.

The board saved the estate additional amounts by validiating gifts from Mellon to his children and to his private educational and charitable trusts.

"There is nothing unique," the decision said, "in the fact that petitioner determined to school his children in the handling of wealth while he was yet alive, or that his interest in them went so far as to provide them with the material means whereby, during his lifetime, they might assume among their fellows a position of influence and leadership."

After Mellon's death, his will showed he had bequeathed all his remaining property to his philanthropic trusts on the theory that his life time gifts provided amply for his children.

Governor Promised 12,000 WPA Jobs By End Of January

Lansing, Dec. 7. (AP)—Governor Murphy, announcing he had obtained a definite promise of 12,000 more WPA jobs for Michigan before the end of January, said today he planned to confer with President Roosevelt soon concerning unemployment in this state.

Murphy and Howard O. Hunter, of Washington, assistant WPA administrator, conferred in the executive offices before the announcement.

The governor made it clear he considered the current business recession serious, and predicted that even if it lasts not more than two or three months, "industrial cities such as Detroit and Flint are going to suffer."

He asserted the automobile industry is sensitive to fluctuations in the business barometer, and that because of this he would "lean over backward to be prepared" for any unemployment emergency.

Murphy said he would discuss industrial conditions in Michigan with the president and with WPA officials because of his desire to be certain that enough artificially created jobs would be available to meet any development.

Murphy reiterated a previous announcement that he had arranged to have 5,000 additional WPA jobs made available in Michigan this month, and an additiontl 7,000 in January

Louis M. Nims, state WPA administrator, also conferred with Hunter today, but took a more optimistic view than Murphy. "We feel that within reasonable limits we can meet the demands put upon us by the business recession," he asserted. "In most counties the problem will be relatively simple. Naturally the number of men added to the rolls will be larger in industrial areas than in the rural counties, and we are confident that we shall be able to cope with the situation."

Nims said a survey showed 43,255 WPA workers on the Michigan rolls today. He said he knew of no definite quotas of extra workers fixed for Michigan either in December or January, and said he thought the December peak load would not pass 47,000.

At one time, the penalty was more severe for killing a stag than for killing a human being in England.

SNOW BLANKET COVERS STATE

Heavy Fall Reported in Western Part of Michigan

(By The Associated Press)

Snow laid a still deeper blanket over much of Michigan Tuesday night even as weather observers foresaw a continuance of temperatures far below freezing.

An absence of strong winds, however, indicated a less arduous highway clearing task than might have been expected for plow crews at work over the state's western areas. Little drifting occurred.

Snow fell steadily along the shore of Lake Michigan, apparently all the way from the southern tip to the north, and temperatures sank from the more moderate levels of the day.

Reports reaching Grand Rapids said snow was "three feet deep" in fields and highways of Allegan county near Fennville. Ten inches was reported from Grand Traverse, Manistee, Lake, Mason, Oceana, and Muskegon counties.

Nowhere were road conditions reported serious, but driving was hazardous in some sections because of heavy snow falling. It was snowing hard from Benton Harbor to Traverse City.

In Detroit, the mercury fell to an unofficial 16 degrees Tuesday night, a six-degree drop during the day. Meteorologists predicted continued snow Wednesday and little change in temperatures.

Munising, Dec. 7.—Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at the Eben community hall for Erick Fahle Burman, 65, of Eben Junction, who died there early Monday morning from a heart attack. Burial will be in the Slapneck cemetery. Burman was born Feb. 14, 1872, in Sweden.

Burman and Unto Immonen were principals in the "red flag" case here in 1933. They were arrested on Aug. 6, 1933, after raising a red flag on a pole at the community hall in Eben.

Tried in circuit court, they were found guilty and Burman was sentenced to six to eight years in prison and Immonen to four to eight years. On appeal to the state supreme court, a new trial was ordered. The men were released from prison when the prosecution decided not to try the case.

amendment."

Warner, president of the McCall Co., called for "repeal or modification of those laws which have contributed to the downward trend," availability of capital funds "to enable industry to go forward and expand both production and employment," cessation of industrial strife and avoidance of increasing lay-offs of workers.

America's plea, he asserted was for "freedom.' '

"If, with freedom," he continued, "we work together as cooperating units in a peaceful society without bitterness or rancor, nothing can stop our progress."

Business, he said, was "willing to do its part" in effecting that cooperation.

Fewer Suckers

If Barnum was right that "there is a sucker born every minute," the "sucker birthrate has declined considerably," Raymond Rubican, advertising executive, told the delegates.

He based his assumption on polls taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion under the direction of George H. Gallup, which, he said, indicated "fairness, good sense and perspicacity" on the part of the public.

The polls, he said, indicated the majority of the public was in favor of regulation of labor unions, their incorporation, peace between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., regulation of strikes, a balanced budget, reduction in relief expenditures, revival of the N.R.A., and a constitutional amendment giving congress the right to greater regulation over industry and agriculture.

It was opposed, however, as indicated by the polls, to a third term for President Roosevelt, sitdown strikes, vigilantism, cash relief and revival of the A. A. A.

SIGNS ARE BETTER

Washington, Dec. 7. (AP)—A big business man indicated today that he saw signs of better cooperation between government and business.

Urging legislation to advance President Roosevelt's program for a boom in home building, Clarence Woolley, chairman of the board of the American Radiator company, told the senate banking committee:

"It is gratifying to note that the atmosphere of tension between government and business is beginning to be eased."

On the other hand, Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, indicated that the government's attitude toward business left much to be desired. Addressing a letter to President Roosevelt and members of congress, he called for a "sincere and definite" change of policy as an incentive to the public to invest its savings.

He proposed:

That the government discontinue "destructive, competitive" policy toward private industry and cease "subsidization" of municipal power plants; that "unfair" competition by the Tennessee Valley authority be stopped and that the plan for establishment of regional planning authorities be abandoned.

He also called for modification of the "death sentence" clause of the holding company act.

While Woolley's talk of cooperation fell soothingly upon some congressional ears, there was no abatement of the clamor for an immediate token of the administration's intentions, such as the submission of a tax reform program to ease the burden of business.

It become increasingly obvious that the special session, now in its fourth of five weeks, might end without final action on any major proposal, with the exception of the housing bill.

Both houses spent the day arguing over amendment to the farm bill. Even if that measure should be approved by the end of this week, little time would be left for the formulation of conference reports and their approval.

All British prime ministers since Sir Hugh Walpole have lived on Downing street.

Alekhine Of Paris World Chess Champ

The Hague, the Netherlands, Dec. 7 (AP)—Dr. Alexander Alekhine of Paris today won the world's chess championship by defeating Dr. Max Euwe who won the title from Alekhine in 1935.

Alekhine was victor in the 25th game of the 30-game series, giving him a total score of 15½ points out of a possible 30. Euwe had 9½ points.

The chess committee proclaimed Alekhine the new champion since Euwe could not amass sufficient points to overcome the challenger's lead. The game score thus far was Alekhine 10, Euwe four, and 11 draws.

DRIVER FATALLY SHOT BY POLICE

Pontiac Man, Suspected of Being Burglar, Bullet Victim

Pontiac, Mich., Dec. 7 (AP)—Chief of Detectives Frank Nelson said today a full investigation would be made into the fatal shooting of Carl Bernhardt, 34, which occurred early today while police were pursuing Bernhardt's car, believing that it carried burglars.

Bernhardt, manager of the pastry concession of a dairy company here, was shot in the head after a six-block automobile race through Pontiac streets at 3:30 a. m. After the shot was fired his car careened wildly and crashed into the front porch of a private residence.

George Goodrich, 18, riding with Bernhardt on his way to work, was uninjured.

Patrolman Forest Hatfield, 29, said he fired from a police car driven by Patrolman Leland Hunt, 28, after twice ordering the fleeing Bernhardt to stop.

The patrolmen said their suspicions were aroused when they saw Bernhardt's car stop in front of the apartment building in which Goodrich lived and saw Goodrich come out of the building carrying a bundle. The bundle contained sheet music. Goodrich said Bernhardt came by for him every morning to take him to work.

Bernhardt and his wife, Helen, came to Pontiac three years ago from St. Ignace.

The widow said tonight she will file charges against the officers involved.

Her husband, she said, "always had the most respect for officers; that is why I do not believe he knew who they were."

"They could have stopped him without killing him," she said. "If city officials or my insurance company do not take action, I will."

years I have suffered untold agony with rheumatism. My whole body ached all over and I was in constant pain. Regardless of all my efforts to make myself comfortable, I could not rest or sleep day or night. All I could do was roll and toss as the pain swept over me. I took various remedies which had been so highly recommended to me but not a thing would take hold of my stubborn case. Then I heard about KruGon and decided to give it a fair trial."

"I am now entirely free from every rheumatic ache and pain," he continued. "Do you wonder that I am so grateful to KruGon. It is wonderful to have regained the former good health of so many years ago when you had almost become resigned to the fact that life was to be ended in suffering. I am now able to get real nights of restful sleep and arise in the morning feeling adequate for a good day's work. There is real pleasure and happiness awaiting similar sufferers if they will but give KruGon a chance to do the same for them that it did for me."

TRUCK DRIVERS FED ON DRINKS

Police and Scientists Make Liquor Tests at Detroit

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP)—Five truck drivers were being plied with free liquor here today—while police scientists looked on and beamed approvingly.

A far cry from a drinking party—the free drinks were part of a very, very scientific attempt to discover what effect intoxicants have on driving ability.

The test was sponsored by the Detroit Industrial Safety Council and the five drivers were volunteer testees. Dr. E. R. Lauer, of Iowa State college, and Dr. Rollo Harger, of Indiana university, were the active testers.

An array of 10 machines was spread out in a hotel hall. Included were a breath tester invented by Dr. Hager, a drivo-meter for testing powers of observation while manipulating controls, a glare tester, a blood pressure machine, a machine for testing degrees of excitability, a machine for testing muscular co-ordination, and various types of vision-testing devices.

This afternoon, each driver was tested in sobriety. Then drinks were served all around with the amount of alcohol in each carefully measured. Half an hour later the drivers were tested again. The procedure was continued with drinks on the hour and tests on the half hour well into the evening. By then, everyone hoped to have obtained results—purely scientific ones, too.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion. Sold everywhere. (c) Bell & Co. 1937.

MANY HAZARDS AT CHRISTMAS

Dangers in Home Are Numerous During Holidays

It is a thin line that lies between joy and tragedy, and the Christmas season often cuts the line in two.

Christmas trees, which are now coming down in truckloads from the north, are pretty things when colored and lighted and horrible things when aflame.

Santa Claus typifies all that is merry at Christmas. But he has been badly burned in past years and death has too often been the result.

It is in this spirit that the American Red Cross wishes everyone a Merry Christmas. If the Red Cross were to send out Christmas cards, each would contain important precautions designed to make that wish come true.

Since Santa Claus will smoke there is danger of hot ashes from his pipe or cigar setting fire to his highly combustible regalia. If he must wear a bushy beard he may easily fix up one for himself out of fluffy wool. Wool does not burn as readily as cotton. If suitable wool is not available, ordinary fluffy cotton may be made fireproof by dipping it into a solution of four ounces of phosphate of ammonia dissolved in a quart of water, and then drying it.

Paper is Hazard

Large quantities of tissue and ordinarily wrapping paper strewn about the room after opening presents make fire the most serious hazard at Christmas time. Matches and smoking materials, lighted candles, electrical short circuits and sparks from the fireplace too frequently start a blaze. It is difficult to keep the room in which celebration is being held wholly free from inflammable material. Care must be taken, however, to set the Christmas tree well away from the fireplace or any other heating device, and to avoid using inflammable decorations. Rather than clutter up the room, wrapping paper should be packed down at once in suitable containers and removed as soon as possible. Any paper to be saved may be folded and placed in a pile at a safe distance from any possible source of fire. None of this material should be burned in the fireplace because it makes a quick blaze with high flames which might easily start a fire in the chimney.

It takes little care to eliminate or keep ignition sources under reasonable control. Smoking, with the inevitable use of matches or automatic lighters should be dispensed with while trimming the tree and later when the gifts are being unwrapped. The use of lighted candles ought to be avoided and if additional wiring for elaborate lighting is needed, leave it to the electrician. A guard should be placed in front of the open fire, particularly while there is inflammable material about. The furnace is also to be considered. Because the family arises at cockcrow on Christmas morning, as a rule, the "heat is turned on," literally to a higher degree than usual. In the excitement of unwrapping parcels and examining gifts, the fire in the basement is too apt to be forgotten and allowed to roar unchecked. Fire results if this situation continues too long.

Falls May Happen

But fire is not the only Christmas hazard. Falls in the home may happen at any time of the year, but particularly when hanging Christmas decorations. There are wreaths to be hung or festoons of pine to be draped or branches of holly to be tucked behind pictures, and most important of all, that be-ribboned bunch of mistletoe to be swung from the highest central point. The tendency to drag up a chair to stand on instead of going down in the cellar for a decent step ladder may lead the mistletoe hanger and home decorator to kiss only the floor.

And be sure that the step ladder is firmly planted with all braces in position before climbing up to fix the mistletoe to the chandelier or ceiling light. It is well to have a member of the family around to lend a steadying hand should it be needed. Go up and down the ladder slowly and carefully. A misstep is all too easy and likely to prove serious.

Usually the best place to fasten holly wreaths is in the center of the window with a bit of wire or red string. For casement windows, a thumb tack in the wood between the panes will do. But for safety's sake don't start hammering nails around windows. Glass shatters easily and the holiday season may be spent wrapping hands in bandages as well as packages in colored paper.

When it comes time to decorate the Christmas tree, remember that heavy ornaments at the top of the tree, unless wired securely into the trunk, may fall on the baby's head. Don't leave scraps of tinsel or tiny wires lying about if there are infants in the household. After the tree stands fully bedecked, make a final inspetion of the wiring.

Gifts Should be Tested

Gifts of electric trains, stoves and the like, should be tested before being presented to a child. The various tools in Johnny's tool chest should be painstakingly explained to him and their use illustrated to protect him from mashed fingers or cuts. If children are carefully instructed and told in detail the workings of their new toys, far less physical damage is likely to occur. Most hurts of this kind come from allowing the child to blunder into some new game or gadget without proper preparation.

All these precautions have been pointed out before. The Red Cross Christmas card, in keeping with its home and farm program to educate residents in preventing accidents before they happen, is an all-year card. The Red Cross continues to talk in terms of "must" and "should" and "don't." Christmas time is for the children, but something in human nature makes children out of old and young alike, and the precautions cited are usually not remembered unless called to mind by a mishap.

WORK STARTED ON ICE RINKS

Ground Being Sprinkled Completion Depends on Cold Weather

Preliminary work was started by city workmen yesterday in preparing the ground for six ice rinks at various points in the city, Engineer A. V. Aronson said yesterday. Completion of the rinks depends entirely upon the weather within the next few days. If the cold weather continues, the rinks will be ready within a few weeks but if the mild weather should continue it will be later before they are completed.

The rink sites were leveled off some time ago and are ready for water.

Much attention is being paid this year to the main rink at Ludington park, which proved so popular with adults last year. The rink, which is to be approximately 200 by 400 feet, is situated at the bottom of the Ludington park hill and is expected to be the site of the winter skating festival which will be held here sometime after the first of the new year.

A hockey rink, approximately 80 by 160 feet, will be constructed a short distance south of the main rink at the park.

A similar arrangement will be made at northtown this year, with the main rink about 100 by 120 feet and the hockey rink being approximately 60 by 140 feet.

As usual, the eight lap track near St. Francis hospital will be maintained this year and work already has begun on it.

Road Builders Will Meet Here Today

Louis F. Levin, county engineer, Chippewa county, and president of the Upper Peninsula Road Builders association, has called a meeting of the association to be held in Escanaba Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday morning.

Headquarters of the meeting will be the Delta hotel.

It is expected that twenty-five or thirty representatives of the fifteen upper peninsula counties will attend.

Many of London's biggest movie palaces show double features.

LOCAL COURTS RAP VIOLATORS

Jones Praises Justices for Cooperation in Aiding Officers

Violations of the state's deer hunting regulations during the season just closed resulted in 80 convictions in the upper peninsula, with fines totaling $1,612.50 and jail sentences 492 days, L. N. Jones, U. P. supervisor for the conservation department, reports.

"Although all violations have not yet been reported," Jones said, "it is likely that the number will not be as great as last year. Fines have not been a great deal heavier, but the number of suspended fines has been smaller. Cooperation from the courts has been good during the deer season."

$290 In Fines Suspended

In addition to handing out $1,612.50 in fines, U. P. justices levied $392.35 in costs. A total of $290 in fines was suspended. One case was dismissed and 14 cases are pending. At Crystal Falls a jury disagreed in the trial of three men accused of headlighting. The case will be heard a second time this week.

The Newberry conservation district reported 25 violations, the largest number to be turned in by any of the six districts. The Escanaba district was second with 16; Crystal Falls third, with 14; Baraga fourth, with 13; Marquette fifth, with eight; and Ewen sixth, with seven.

Violations Varied

The violations included possession of illegal deer, killing of does and fawns, hunting without a license, a non-resident hunting with a resident license, headlighting, carrying a loaded gun in an automobile, hunting without a license, improperly tagging a deer and other violations of a similar nature.

One of the stiffest penalties of the season was meted out when Justice T. J. Walters, of Munising, fined Bernard Kamecki, of Marquette, $100 and costs of $30 and imposed an additional jail sentence of 30 days. Justice Walters said that if Kamecki did not pay his fine within 30 days, 60 days would be added to the 30-day sentence. Kamecki pleaded not guilty of killing a male fawn, but was convicted by jury.

Many $50 Fines

In many instances in the upper peninsula, fines of $50 and costs have been assessed, and in the Escanaba district the amount of fines almost doubled the 1936 record. Although there were 16 cases in 1936 and in 1937, total fines jumped from $225 last year to $450 this year.

Speaking generally concerning the 1937 season, Jones said: "The number of deer carried across the straits would indicate that final figures will show this year's kill to be substantially larger than last year. Reports also indicate that upper peninsula hunters faired much better this year." Early figures, he said, indicate a falling off of non-resident hunters.

Plumbing Inspector Works In Escanaba

John Obermeyer of Iron Mountain, state plumbing inspector, has been working in Escanaba during the past few days, making inspections of recent installations and checking on persons operating without license.

Steve Grenfell was arrested and pleaded guilty to a charge of violation of the state plumbing code. He was arraigned before Justice H. E. Ranguette and paid a fine of $10 and costs.

Obermeyer said that several other persons operating without licenses are expected to be arrested within a few days.

Transportation Changes

AN apparently far-sighted student has made the prediction that the world as a whole will change its methods of transportation completely every 200 years. Whether this is prophetic or not, it does recall the nation's earliest modes of public transportation—that of canals.

While steam railroads and steamships lines had their greatest development between 1850 and 1900, it is interesting to note that almost exactly 200 years from the time the nation began construction of canals the automobile made its appearance to revolutionize completely public transportation; for while most of the country's important canals were during the first half of the nineteenth century, they were suggested as early as 1673, Father Marquette pointing out that water connection between Lake Michigan and the Illinois river might be easily achieved.

La Salle in 1795 also pointed out the desirability of such a water route. When William Penn laid out the city of Philadelphia in 1682, and planned for another city within the Province of Pennsylvania, he referred, in an announcement, to the feasibility of connecting the waters of the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers. As canals were being experimented with in 1690, so was the automobile being seriously considered in 1890.

At one time this country had nearly 4500 miles of artificial waterways constructed during the nation's youthful period of expansion. Today only about 300 miles of such waterways remain, and judging from the nation's rapid development of other transportation systems, all canals will soon be a matter of past history. Only a small per cent of the nation's population recall these primitive modes of freight and passenger transportation.

For two decades railroads have been facing economic difficulties, many of them in recent years being able to survive only because of public financial assistance. Air transportation is rapidly developing and it is believed by many that the competition of air lines and other motorized facilities will limit railroads and steamship expansion. Whether this assumption is correct or not remains for history to record. There is a striking parallel between competition meted out to canal lines and like difficulties now being faced by railroads.

Should Be Paved

THERE is much merit in the suggestion that the Ford River road should be paved from the M-35 cutoff at Twenty-third street into the city so as to induce tourists to visit this community instead of passing it by as many have been doing.

The idea was brought up at a joint meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs on Monday, but it is a matter that has been often discussed before by citizens.

There can be no quarrel with the state highway department for the routing of M-35 through Twenty-third street. This is in pursuance of a policy that is generally followed throughout the country with a view of speeding up through traffic. Any motorist who is bound for a certain destination and wants to reach it as soon as possible does not enjoy traveling through congested business districts.

In many instances, however, tourists who have planned to stop at Escanaba have passed by this city without realizing that they have done so. If the city of Escanaba would pave the Ford River road up to the junction, many tourists who come from the south on M-35 might be induced to take the shore-line route into the city. At the present time, this stretch of road is very uninviting, and it is quite natural that tourists will follow the concrete which diverts them from Escanaba.

New Fire Record

WITH the forest fire season now definitely ended, the state conservation department has issued a report, which shows that 1937 set an all-time record for low fire loss in Michigan's woods.

Only slightly more than 14,000 acres were burned over this year, which is about 3,000 acres less than the previous lowest loss recorded in 1935. Rainfall well distributed over the spring, summer and fall months was a great help, of course, in keeping the first loss down.

But recognition must be given to the fact that the state conservation department and the U. S. Forest Service have developed efficient organizations for the prevention and control of blazes. Progress is being made in the early discovery of fires, and a network of truck trails through the forest areas makes it possible for these conservation agencies to reach the scene with dispatch.

While Nature when kindly disposed, will always be an important ally in the efforts to keep down the fire loss, the records clearly reveal that the fire menace is being more effectively controlled now than in the past.

Full Steam Ahead

THE industrial skies are pretty dark these days, and the steel industry in particular is singing the blues. But it is worth while to look at some remarks made by Nathan L. Miller, ex-governor of New York and now general counsel for United States Steel, at the launching of a 610-foot steamship at Lorain, O., the other day.

This ship, the second giant carrier built this fall for U. S. Steel's subsidiary, the Pittsburgh Steamship Co., is large, up-to-date—and expensive. And Governor Miller truly remarked that U. S. Steel "is not preparing for the undertaker" when it builds ships such as these.

"Construction of the ships," he added, "is only part of the corporation's capital expenditures in face of current depressing business conditions. United States Steel is expressing its confidence in business by keeping plants, fleets and other equipment in the highest state of efficiency to produce steel cheaply and pass on to employes, in the form of good wages, profits that are not absorbed by high federal taxes."

Puzzle For Chiang

WITHIN a comparatively short time, probably, the Japanese army will have captured Nanking, capital of China. And in that connection will come the greatest test which Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's military genius has yet faced.

For capture of the Chinese capital would not necessarily mean the end of the war. China is large, it lacks the complex organization of most countries, and if Chiang refuses to sacrifice his army in a futile defense of his capital he can still give the Japanese plenty to worry about. Remember, as a parallel, that in 1865 it was the capture of Lee's army, not the capture of Richmond, which brought Grant's campaign to triumph.

What will Chiang do? An heroic "last stand" before the capital would be the obvious thing—but unless he has the wisdom to shun the obvious, Japan's victory in the current war is as good as certain.

BROWNRIGG LEARNS SOMETHING
(Ironwood Globe)

William Brownrigg, personnel director of the state's civil service commission, has already reached the commission, has already reached the conclusion that the operation of state government is in great need of overhauling. What he learned about the disparity in salaries paid by the state is convincing proof.

Brownrigg found that payroll clerks in the auditor general's accounting division, who have the responsibility of checking payrolls and expense accounts are paid $1,200 a year for this work. In contrast, departments, such as the liquor control commission, the highway department and others pay $2,500 to clerks who merely make out the payrolls. Brownrigg naturally concludes that both rates of pay cannot be right.

The personnel director, perhaps unwittingly, has disclosed one of the reasons for the $3,000,000 a year increase in the state's payroll. If he keeps on probing, he may also disclose that the state has no need for several thousand of the 17,000 employes now on the payroll.

MORE SEEK BENEFITS
(Iron Mountain News)

More than 500 Dickinson county farmers have made application to be included in the 1938 soil conservation program. Three hundred of their number shared in the benefits of the plan during 1937, receiving some $13,000, and this no doubt has acted as a stimulant to the others.

The farmers are not to be criticized for accepting a handout. Uncle Sam is imploring them to seek payment for the improvement of the soil fertility of their acreages through managed crop production and restriction. The congress is struggling with new agricultural legislation about which no one apparently knows very much, but there is common agreement that the purse strings are not to be pulled tight and the farmer will be remembered in one way or another.

Within the next two weeks there will be community meetings at which committees are to be chosen for the purpose of arranging the 1938 program. At the same time the farmers will be given an explanation of the plan under which they will be paid if they use their potato crops for livestock feed.

New deal royalists may be able to figure it all out to their satisfaction, but economic royalists—and a good many others—are stumped. The objective is crop control and maintenance of price levels, but it hasn't worked out to save the farmer from being affected by the "recession" just like any other individual. Can it be possible that something is wrong somewhere?

SMALL BUSINESS MEN
(Ohio State Journal)

Dewitt Emery, youthful business man of Akron, believes that through the effective organization of the smaller business men of the nation these enterprising but somewhat burdened men may get a break, at least by 1940. They have found themselves hit by social security, unemployment insurance, local, state and federal taxes, increased costs of materials and a lot of regulations and they desire some relief and easement.

Somehow or other they survived the recent depression, but they fear another one might kill them off entirely. Mr. Emery does not hanker for politics, but believes that the smaller men must, if they would survive and keep their concerns going, enter politics or, at least, see that somebody who has their welfare in mind does enter politics.

This group is organized without any qualifications as to religion, race, politics or sort of business engaged in. It must be manifest to all who do any observing that the smaller concerns have felt governmental interference, extravagance and dictation even more than the larger ones. For it is easier for the large firm to pass on its burdens than for the smaller one to do the same thing.

(Traverse City Record-Eagle)

Escanaba is not only alive to its possibilities but has just given an interesting demonstration of its willingness to spend money to capitalize on them.

Out-door editors, news reel men, radio commentators and travel bureau executives throughout the Middle West were invited by the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce to be its guests during the deer hunting season.

The Escanaba C. of C. borrowed the barracks of an abandoned C. C. C. camp in the heart of the Hiawatha National Forest, moved in chef, provisions, sleeping equipment and guides to stage a party that will have its repercussions in publicity for Escanaba and Delta county for many months. Each one of the many men invited was told he would need to bring only his rifle, ammunition and license. How many were invited, de won't know but the list must have been long for one invitation was received in Traverse City.

World Affairs Reviewed

(By The AP Feature Service)

All the "isms" in the world haven't convinced monarchists that the old days are gone forever.

Quite willing now, in most cases, to listen to the voice of the people, to recognize a constitution or to do anything else within reason, a half dozen or more pretenders hiding out in Europe are ready at the drop of a scepter to grab a crown.

Their chances of being called upon to do so range from virtual zero (in the case of Anthony W. Hall of London, who calls himself King Anthony I of England) to at least fair (in the case of young Otto of the Hapsburgs, for whom some see events shaping up to restoration in Austria).

Besides these pretenders, Europe supports several onetime monarchs who show no signs of wanting their old jobs back. There is the Duke of Windsor, for instance, who only a year ago was King of England; and aging Kaiser Wilhelm, apparently content to chop wood in Holland and leave Germany to Hitler.

—ARCHDUKE OTTO OF HUNGARY—

In the castle of Steenockerzel, near Brussels, 25-year-old Archduke Francis Joseph Otto of Hungary maintains as imperial court in exile and hopes for his restoration to the throne his Hapsburg ancestors held for eight centuries. Odds seem to be against his reigning over Hungary, but in Austria the monarchist movement is strong and apparently has the good will of Chancellor von Schuschnigg. Otto is a grand nephew of Francis Joseph, last emperor of Austria-Hungary.

—THE DUKE OF GUISE—

Pretender to the throne of France, the 63-year-old Duke of Guise, has issued a 5,000-word manifesto announcing his decision to "reconquer the throne of my fathers." Though there was little to connect the two events, his pronouncement was followed next day by an announcement that the French secret police had uncovered widespread monarchist plotting at home. Unlike many royal pretenders, the head of the Bourbons is a man of property. He owns castles in France and Belgium.

—GRAND DUKE CYRIL OF RUSSIA—

Head of the house of royal Romanoffs and "Emperor of All the Russians" (by 1934 proclamation of White Russians living in France) is Grand Duke Cyril. At 61, he waits in Paris with fading hope to be called to the throne last occupied by his cousin, Czar Nicholas, assassinated in the revolution of 1917. He is, or was at last report, supported in a one-servant apartment by 7,000 francs a month from Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, sister of his wife who died in 1936.

—PRINCE JUAN OF SPAIN—

Youngest son of former King Alfonso XIII of Spain, Prince Juan became the Spanish royal family's heir apparent when both his elder brothers married commoners. Spanish monarchists supporting General Franco and his Insurgents in the civil war want 24-year-old Juan to return from England, as king if Franco wins. Juan has spent four years in the British navy and studied law. In 1935 he married the Infanta Maria of Bourbon-Sicily, a niece by marriage of the Duke of Guise.

—HAILE SELASSIE OF ETHIOPIA—

Haile Selassie fled from his Ethopian empire in April, 1936, as Italian armies pushed toward his capital at Addis Ababa. From his new home, a two-acre estate near London, the former emperor said recently on his 46th birthday that he had despaired of regaining his throne. He clings, nevertheless, to his title. Currently he is involved in lawsuits by which, it is said, he hopes to supplement his dwindling resources. A good many relatives are living off him in England.

The Capital Parade

BY ALSOP AND KINTNER

Washington—The President's Housing program is like a ship successfully launched in the presence of a cheering crowd, but headed for a nice sail through rocks in a tempest. The administration housing experts count on New Deal ballyhoo to carry the program through, but they are frankly nervous about it.

The success or failure of the program is pretty important, since it is the essential feature of the President's present conservative approach to the depression. Briefly, the idea is to stimulate a great private construction boom by offering very high government guarantees on mortgages, and forcing a general lowering of building costs. Unfortunately, the lowering of building costs seems essential to success.

That means, first, a violent, although probably sub rosa, row with the Building Trades Unions. In the large cities, where housing is most needed, high labor costs are the biggest element in high building costs.

Right here, the housing exports will collide head-on with big Bill Hutcheson, of the Carpenters and Woodworkers, and John Coefield, of the Plumbers, who happen to be the most determined anti-New Dealers in the ranks of labor. The President's housing men hope to persuade Building Trades Workers to accept a contractor-guaranteed annual wage in return for lowered hourly rates, but Hutcheson and Coefield are having none of it.

Two weapons will be used against Hutheson and Coefield. First will be the ballyhoo, emphasizing the patriotic duty of cooperating in the Housing-Recovery program. And second, the New Dealers will go behind the backs of the Building Trades Union leaders to their locals in handpicked cities, and try to arrange annual wage deals with the locals.

The annual wage idea is an old pet of the President's, and there is some prospect that the administration will get tough about it. One high administration official is already planning a regular Dutch uncle lecture to the Building Trades Workers.

Second, the housing experts will have to win a fight with some contractors and most building material manufacturers. Prices are high and price-fixing is common, especially among the manufacturers. The prices must come down. The anti-trust laws will be brandished threateningly at the obstinate, and once more the old patriotic ballyhoo will be used to build a fire under them.

And third, the housing experts will have to conquer the Banks and Building and Loan Associations. Their weapons for fighting the labor and construction people are not much better than sugar tongs, but they have a real automatic pistol to fire at the money-lenders. The pistol is the plan for National Mortgage Associations.

In the Housing Bill, the RFC is authorized to advance $50,000,000 for the capital of the first of these. With $50,000,000 of capital, the association may issue $1,000,000 of debentures to the public.

The association will use its $1,000,000,000 to offer mortgage money direct to the public. In fact, it will be in open competition with the private money-lenders, which the private money-lenders will certainly resent. Probably they will have to take it and like it, however. Here again, ballyhoo will be resorted to. The ballyhooers will go into communities and plead with local leaders to take mortgages on new construction as a patriotic duty.

Even with the mortgage associations, it must be admitted that the prospects for the Housing program look a trifle grim. The President's economists believe that, to do good, the housing boom must be started when spring brings a seasonal upturn in business. And in Great Britain, where the labor and material costs problems were non-existent, it took a couple of years to get housing going in a big way.

OUT OF THE SOCK

A mildly inflationary move by the administration may be expected during the next months, when the time comes for additional relief appropriations. The President, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and other eminent New Dealers are beginning to have a sort of psychosis about the size of the national debt. They will have to find more money for relief somewhere, but they don't want to add to the debt total.

Tokio reporters must be college graduates. News hounds in sheep skins.

Lyrics of Life

By Douglas Malloch

THE DESCENT OF MAN

God made the world, and then made man,
And that was how it all began.
God made the world, and then made men,
Who have been noisily since then
Engaged in changing here and there
A world already pretty fair.

Once clothes were needless, food was free,
And ev'ry mortal had a tree,
And not a thing to labor at.
But then man up and changed all that
And introduced upon the earth
Greed, envy, other things of worth.

When no one anything possessed,
Then none was jealous of the rest.
But when a woman put on furs
Another wanted some like hers.
So man came down from out his tree
And made the world a factory.

Then, weary of its laboring,
Mankind designed the next best thing,
Sought ways to get the things desired
Without the labor they required.
So man invented in good time
On God-made earth his man-made crime.

And so I might go on and on,
As man has done from earthly dawn,
But, if I did, then each new verse
Might, like the man, grow worse and worse,
Till someone said, "Go climb a tree"—
And that is where I'd like to be.

Christmas Seal Purchase Urged

The following article taken from the "Michigan Farmer," is reprinted at the request of Mrs. Lloyd Walker, chairman of the Christmas Seal sale, as a part of the campaign in promotion of the sale in Delta county.

Buy Some Stamps

"It was not many years ago that when doctors pronounced a person tubercular the unfortunate victim had little to look forward to outside of death. Today that situation is changed, and thousands of persons every year suffering from the disease are restored to good health. A very important factor in this welcome change is the unselfish work of the National Tuberculosis Association, which has carried on a strenuous fight largely from funds secured through the sale of Christmas seals that are offered to the public every year by mail and personal solicitation between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Fortunately, there is no fixed amount you have to buy to participate in this fine work, because the stamps are a penny apiece and any number may be purchased, depending upon how much you can spare. Buy what you can afford with the feeling that any purchase will be appreciated, be it small or large."

Gifts Of Beauty Always Welcome

By BETTY CLARK
AP Feature Service Writer

Give gifts of beauty to the woman you want to flatter.

Bride, matron or grandmother, every woman is perennially concerned with personal loveliness. She'll take the evidence that you recognize it as a cherished compliment.

But don't walk into the first department store you come to and buy just anything you see on the beauty counter.

Most women have set notions about the shade of their powder and rouge. So, unless you know those shades, it's a good idea to steer clear.

A Lipstick? Perhaps

Lipsticks are semi-taboo—though most women will try a new lipstick long before they will think of giving up their favorite rouge and powder.

Beauty accessories, on the other hand, are gifts of another color. Few women have enough of them.

Perfume and toilet water atomizers make especially welcome gifts. But you'd better know what you're going after. Buy a small one if you're in doubt. It cuts down on waste. See that it isn't top-heavy, that it will stand wear and tear, and the the top fastens easily and stay put.

Compacts should be large, flat and light in weight.

Bottle kits should contain enough bottles or pockets. They should be reasonably large, but should fit into the smallest suitcase. They should have a handle so they may be hung up in berths or compartments.

Leather manicure sets are much less expensive—and handsomer—this season than ever. They should be equiped with the correct accesories, in cluding good scissors. (Test the scissors and you'll know whether the set is a good one or not.)

Comb and brush sets should be decorative and practical. The brush should have firm, resilient bristles. the comb should be fine or coarsetoothed—or a combination—depending on the type and length of the hair of the user. The mirror should be clear and large.

McKenney On Bridge

By William E. McKenney, Secretary, American Bridge League

It was rubber bridge and North and South were playing one of those family against family games and far behind in the score. That is the sole justification for the bidding of the slam. The hand was sent to me by Robert W. Wilks, of Yonkers, N. Y.

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

North: ♠ J 5 ♥ K 10 3 2 ♦ 10 7 4 ♣ K 10 4 3

West: ♠ Q 7 6 4 2 ♥ 9 8 7 6 ♦ J 5 2 ♣ 5

East: ♠ A 9 8 ♥ Q J ♦ 9 8 6 ♣ Q 9 8 7 6

South (Dealer): ♠ K 10 3 ♥ A 5 4 ♦ A K Q 3 ♣ A J 2

Rubber—All vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
2 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass
4 N.T.	Pass	5 N.T.	Pass
6 N.T.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead—♠ 4. 7

The opening lead of the spade four was won by East with the ace, and South won the return of the nine of spades with the king.

Things looked black indeed but South went manfully to work, trusting that lady luck would turn her favors his way. He led three rounds of diamonds and that suit broke.

West, declarer decided, had held five spades originally. The heart situation looked bad, but South laid down the ace, East dropping the queen. South did not think this was a singleton, but decided there was a way to find out.

West had shown five spades and three diamonds. Now if he also held five hearts, then he was void of clubs.

The declarer led a low club from his hand, and when West played a club, he now knew East held at least one more heart. The king was played in dummy and East played the six. The king of hearts was played and East's jack fell.

Contract Problem
(Solution in next issue)

East bid diamonds and West bid spades, yet North and South arrived at a four-heart contract. West's club opening was won by South with the seven. The ace of hearts was cashed. You should have enough information, now, to make the contract safely.

North: ♠ 9 3 ♥ 9 8 6 5 3 ♦ 10 7 3 ♣ A 10 2

West: ♠ K 10 8 5 2 ♥ Q 4 2 ♦ None ♣ K 9 8 6 5

East: ♠ J 7 6 ♥ None ♦ A Q J 8 6 5 2 ♣ J 4 3

South (Dealer): ♠ A Q 4 ♥ A K J 10 7 ♦ K 9 4 ♣ Q 7

Duplicate—N. and S. vul.
Opener—♣ 6. 7

Knowing the distribution of West's hand now made it easy for the declarer to read the club distribution, so a small club was led from dummy and the jack finessed. The ace of clubs was then played and West was forced to make another discard, having discarded a spade on the second club play. He discarded another small spade.

Now declarer led the three of diamonds and West was forced to either part with the queen of spades or a heart. He played a low heart and declarer having discarded dummy's club ten on the diamond, now won the last two tricks with the ten and three of hearts.

Of course, I do not defend the bidding. It was a little ambitious, but the play was good enough to take advantage of any favorable factor in the adverse distribution.

Theatres

AT THE DELFT

When a husband is too occupied with outside interests to give any time to his home, has his wife the right to look elsewhere for romance?

That is the problem treated by the new Marlene Dietrich picture, "Angel," which opens today at the Delft Theatre. "Angel" was directed by Ernest Lubitsch and features Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas in top male roles.

Marlene Dietrich plays the wife of Herbert Marshall, who is a diplomat too busy with state affairs to have time for romance. She goes off on a secret trip to Paris, where she meets Melvyn Douglas, who is returning to England after a long sojourn in India. Immediately they fall in love, and spend the one evening she has free together. She refuses to tell her name, saying that although she regrets it, teh evening must be looked upon as an incident which cannot be repeated. Douglas names her "Angel." In spite of the appeal of Douglas, she goes back home and takes up her life with Marshall, who does not realize how unhappy she is, and who knows nothing about the Paris trip.

WE, the WOMEN

BY RUTH MILLETT

On first thought it seems a bit ludicrous to think of a group of college students voting on the worth of the ten commandments as rules for modern living. That happened the other day at New York University.

Ruth Millett

But it is interesting to hear how the commandments stood up under so much "free thought."

"Thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother" is just as good a rule today as it was thousands of years ago, all but twelve of the 1485 students agreed.

Many of the "jury," however, questioned the soundness of the commandments dealing with man's attitude toward God and the rules for sex conduct.

Not a single commandment was endorsed by every student. A few even took exception to "Thou shalt not kill" and "Thou shalt not steal."

But on the whole the students decided that the old commandments are pretty good rules to follow. At least they didn't have any better suggestions.

On first thought mothers and fathers will probably either laugh or grow indignant about a group of inexperienced young people having the nerve to condemn or condone the respected ten commandments. Their attitude will depend largely on whether they have more humor than religion, or the other way around.

But if they give the religious poll a second thought, they will see that those young people were simply putting down on paper the criticisms of the commandments that the world is busy living.

Why is it worse or more absurd for Junior to say he thinks that "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife" is outmoded than for his father to tell the world that he is planning to marry Mrs. So-and-so just as soon as she gets a divorce?

And if Mary says "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods" is the bunk, so is Mary's mother saying it when she nags her husband because the Joneses have a new car.

Don't smile too wisely at the college students. Or don't worry for fear they are headed straight for perdition. They at least gave the ten commandments a few minutes of serious thought. And that's something.

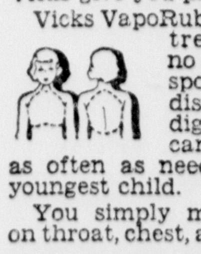
Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.



You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin . . .

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

On The RECORD

By Dorothy Thompson

The Grouse on Geography

"What the world needs," said the Grouse sententiously, "is to direct its distinguished attention to the study of geography. Less free verse, amateur dramatics, basket - weaving and kindred subjects and more geography. Also simple geometry. A straight line, I was taught in my youth, is the shortest distance"——

Dorothy Thompson

"Whatever are you talking about? Do you want some bacon?"

"Geography, Geometry. The geometry of the world today is based on the theory that the longest way 'round is the shortest way home. That is a sentimental, not a scientific, observation."

"I don't know what you are talking about."

"You often don't. The immediate cause of this observation is a little pamphlet which has come to me by way of the business men of Kyoto, Japan, Textile Building. A pretty little pamphlet with pictures of peaceful fishermen and pretty Kyoto girls. And it seems that I have been gravely misinformed in the public prints and news reels about the Sino-Japanese conflict."

"Misinformed?"

"Yes, my dear. I have been thinking that bombs dropped upon Nanking were directed against the Chinese, whose lives they took. It seems this is not the fact. They are directed against Russians. The Japanese government, taking its cue from the late Woodrow Wilson, announces that it has no quarrel with the Chinese people. It loves them to death. Its quarrel is with the Soviet Union."

"So what?"

"Allow me to develop my argument in my own rambling way. This little pamphlet begins with a proclamation from the Mikado, the Emperor of Japan, affirming that the adventure into China is for the purpose of establishing peace. You yourself have often maintained, as I remember, that the next war will be fought not for democracy, but for peace. We are told that peace is threatened by the fact that 'Soviet Russia, stretching her tentacles through Outer Mongoldia . . . makes it impossible for the world to remain indifferent. Therein,' says this pamphlet, 'lies the threat of a world conflagration.' And it is to stop Russia from making this world conflagration that Japan is in China. She is 'not there for any aggressive purposes.'

'The fundamental issue at stake, we are told, is whether China's teaming masses will become steeped in Communism. The villian is General Chiang Kai-shek, who, having once fought the communistic Kuomintang government, has dared to sign an agreement with Soviet Russia. This agreement, to get arms from Russia in case of attack, amounts to a declaration of hostilities.

"Now, of course, this argument is not confined to China. Germany, Italy and Japan all consider that Soviet Russia is a menace to world peace. They are only fighting, wherever they may be fighting, to put down Soviet Russia. And now you understand what I mean about geography and geometry."

"I understand vaguely. Not exactly."

"The shortest route to Russia, my child, is not by way of Shanghai, Nanking, Peiping and Jehol. The shortest route is by way of Vladivostok—which is very near to Japan indeed. The shortest route between Berlin and Moscow is not by way of Valencia. The shortest route between Rome and Leningrad is not via Addis Ababa. Italy, Germany and Japan have all openly announced that they aim to stand together and down Communism in the interests of world peace. The seat of Communism, local and international, is Moscow. There it rules, and there the 'party line' is laid down, and from there the world movement, such as it is, is directed. But, obviously, these nations don't know geography. Or geometry. They think that a curved and zig-zag line is the straightest distance between two points. They deposit astonished Italian soldiers on the Spanish coast when they think they are going to attack Russia in Ethiopia.

"Now this unfortunate confusion about geography and geometry is very dangerous. Because you just never can tell where these fellows are going to turn up next on their long, long march to Moscow. I read in the papers that some of them were parading in brown shirts on Long Island the other day, and in New Jersey. If they want to train on this continent, obviously, they should go to Alaska. But, mark my words, you will find them blundering around in Wisconsin. Russia, you may recall, lies to the East of Germany, but France is terrified that the geographists in Berlin may take it into their heads that it lies westward, and that one day an army may march into Paris, shouting, "Down with Stalin!" Obviously they have already mistaken Madrid for Leningrad, and the Mediterranean for the Arctic, and Arabia for Siberia. And the Czechoslovaks are all worked up because the Germans apparently think that Prague is Odessa.

"And the Russians are all mixed up in their geography, too. They think that Fascism is a menace to world peace, and ought to be put down, once and for all. They believe in putting it down by underground penetration. So they send their agents to New York and London and Paris and Madrid, obviously in the illusion that these are German, Italian, or Japanese capitals.

"There ought to be a commission," concluded the Grouse. "Maybe the Carnegie Peace Foundation, which has lots of professors associated with it, and publishes a lot of books and reports and things, might take a hand. They ought to send the boys over to Moscow, Rome, Berlin and Tokio and say: 'Boys, here is a globular map of the world. Will you just stop the fighting a minute and take a peep at it? Lookit, boys, the place where you want to go is there. See? A Guernica baby is not a commissar.'"

LOST KINGDOM

by OREN ARNOLD, Copyright 1937, NEA Service, Inc.

Yesterday: At the end of their endurance, Bob and Melissa are rescued by a strange, brown little people. They start downward in the cavern after them.

CHAPTER XVII

They had no idea where they were going. They were just walking, under escort.

"This is going to make a good story, if we ever get back to tell it," 'Lissa ventured at last.

Bob smiled through his bewilderment. "I'll say!"

"We're going down all the time, Bob."

"Up and down both. I can't estimate how much. But if we suddenly come onto the devil himself I won't be surprised."

"I'll never be surprised at anything again! Know what I'm thinking, dear?"

"No 'Lissa. What?"

"About New York. And life there. I used to be so bored with it. Nothing ever happened! That's why I answered your advertisement."

The brown men watched them carefully, spoke frequently to each other, showed them a fairly smooth path. Bob held Mary Melissa's arm all the while, to aid her.

"Are you sorry, now, that you answered it?" He looked at her. She was even more lovely than he had imagined her to be, when they had kissed there in the darkness. At least he told her so; actually she was sadly tousled and unkempt, not to mention her weariness. "No," she declared, smiling. "I'll never be sorry."

The walk wasn't very long. With that sudden surprise with which a train emerges from a tunnel, the strange party turned an angle in the cave and blinked at daylight. Near the exit they saw other things too; mostly great baskets and jars, and some stacks of animal skins. The area seemed to be a kind of storehouse. Bob's interest mounted rapidly.

"We've surely stumbled onto another tribe of Indians," said he, "and lucky for us. They're some tribe strange to me, but probably a few of them speak English. We'll come around here again and investigate. I thought I knew all about this border country."

Heralds evidently had hurried ahead with the news of the white couple, for as they emerged from the cave, blinking and squinting, they saw some dozens of men, women and children hastening toward them. They, too, were all brown.

Bob and Mary Melissa instantly noted the complete absence of any evidence of "civilization." In dress, possessions, manners, even speech, these people were something from another century, from somewhere back in the middle ages as man reckons time.

"Do any of you speak English?" Bob called.

Evidently no one did. All stopped talking, and stared. He tried again.

"We are hungry. Please give us food, and water." He pointed to his mouth, and to Mary Melissa's.

They understood that. At least one dignified elderly man did. He spoke a few words as if in command and two women hastened away. Shortly they were back with earthen bowls, both water and food. The food was a thick hot gruel of corn meal, with some pieces of meat. The hungry pair ate again, gratefully, and strength grew in them. They could enjoy some sleep, but this was no time for it, they knew.

Bob Barry—Dr. Robert Wilson Barry, Ph.D., now—was studying the situation intently. He bethought himself of another fundamental in human nature, and so took his shiny gold watch from his pocket.

With some show of pomp, he held it out and walked to the man who had ordered their food. The brown man accepted it, evidently with high pleasure.

Instantly the visitors were forgotten while the natives gathered around the shining gift.

"They don't even know what a watch is, Bob! Look." Mary Melissa whispered, intensely interested. "Have they never even seen a watch before?"

Suddenly one of them discovered the ticking, laughed and talked excitedly in announcing it to the others. Everyone had to listen then, as if they were so many children. In time, though, they looked querulously at Bob; he stepped forward and took the watch again.

The young scientist pointed at the sun, and at the watch. With extended arm, he swept in an arc from horizon to horizon, then with his finger he indicated the motion of the hour hand. He held up the watch and the yellow gold gleamed.

As if by royal command, then, a murmur of awe swept through the brown audience. The leader spoke a short sentence or two, and the entire assembly lifted both hands—held them high as if in worship or salute. Silence reigned, while Bob Barry's jaw fell.

He and 'Lissa stared in fresh surprise at this phenomenon. Nearly a hundred people had suddenly saluted a watch. The attitude was undeniably one of respect, of reverence even.

"Lower the watch—lower it, Bob," whispered 'Lissa. He had unconsciously kept it held high, to reflect the sun.

He got the point. When he lowered the trinket, and with great show of deference gave it back to the brown leader, the people dropped their arms and began talking again.

"Imagine that!" Bob murmured. "But it makes sense, by George it does, 'Lissa! These people are sun worshipers. See? It's a common thing. Most of the aborigines in this country were. All strength comes from the sun, all good things, all of life. Even the Hopi Indians, and the Navajos, have some of that. A Navajo home is always built with the door facing east, to catch the sunrise light. Many Indian dances are prayers to the sun. Get it?"

"Yes!" she replied. "And Bob—you told them that the watch was a sun, a little sun. See?"

It seemed correct. If he had done so, it was a lucky move, he told her. What more likely to impress the simple folk, than to be messengers bearing a "little Sun?"

They looked then to study the countryside. It was typical of the Mexican border country, as to mountains and cliffs, but immediately before them lay a valley that was cultivated and green. It was not large, maybe a thousand acres. There was but one village. Houses were built of stone, and were clustered near the great cave which Bob and 'Lissa had just left.

"This is in some kind of a box canyon," Bob declared, stuying the terrain. "Look at those sheer cliffs, all around us."

Their arrival had completely upset the community. Evidently all the citizens—Bob counted 90-odd of them—came to see the white couple. But not one could speak an English word, although Bob caught some phrases much like the speech of pueblo Indians.

"I'm going to tackle that chief again," he told 'Lissa, "and see what I can do by drawing pictures and making signs."

OUR BOARDING HOUSE — WITH MAJOR HOOPLE

WILLKIE LEADS UTILITIES WAR

He Voted for Roosevelt in 1932, Though He Regrets It Now

BY NEA Service

Easily first among business men who are aggressively fighting against government competition with private business, and against what they consider hobbling restriction and regulation of business is Wendell Lewis Willkie.

It was Willkie who recently sat in at the White House on conferences aimed at producing an "armistice" that would release much expansion in the privately-owned public utility field. It is Willkie who, instead of secluded grumbling, preferred a militant public crusade in defence of what he believes to be much-maligned and sore-beset public utility companies.

It is Willkie who, as head of the Commonwealth & Southern Corp., has pioneered in the "higher volume at lower prices" technique. And it is Willkie who was so successful at it in the face of TVA competition that he is now the unofficial spokesman of the billion-dollar electric power industry in its running guerrilla fight against "government interference."

He Voted For Roosevelt

Willkie is extraordinarily well qualified to conduct negotiations which may lead to a "truce" between government and business. By nature and training he is able to see something of "the other side." Willkie actually voted for Roosevelt back in 1932, and further, gave $150 to the Democratic campaign fund of that year.

True, he regretted both actions later, but his membership even in the "For Roosevelt in 1932" club marks him as comparatively progressive and liberal among executives in the industry he represents. He is not quite 46 years old.

Willkie went from his birth city of Elwood, Ind., to the state university at Bloomington as a near-Socialist, Active in campus politics, he took to public speaking like a cow to clover and was an officer of the Jackson Club following a Democratic tradition in the family. Returning to Elwood, he married Edith Wilk, a librarion.

Following college, Willkie spent 10 years in Akron, Ohio, practicing law and handling many personal injury suits against the street car company. That gave him an insight into the feeling of the public toward public utilities that he has never forgotten.

"A businessman may complain that the President has overcapitalized the discontent of the public against business." Willkie said only a few days ago, "but he can't say that the discontent did not exist."

Crusades Against "Interference."

Willkie then went to New York with a law firm which represented Commonwealth & Southern. Within four years he withdrew from the law firm to head the utility combine.

That was in 1933. Less than a year later Willkie began his crusade against "government interference," and government competition. With his own personal skirts and those of his company, relatively clean and untouched by the abuses which had drawn criticism on the public utilities. Willkie was in a good position to crusade against the holding company "death sentence" bill and the various threats and restraints which seemed to him to be hampering business and preventing it from making good time along the recovery road.

Willkie is fearless and outspoken. He never hesitates at jobs like taking on the governement's redoubtable David Lilienthal in public debate, and press stateissue from him with a deadliness of aim and timing of a man who well understands public relations.

Willkie is a large-framed, distinctly handsome man, careless in dress, and informal in manner. He keeps Indiana roots alive by ownership of two warm back in his home state, though New York and Washinkton claim almost all his time today.

Compromise His Goal.

But though he crusades for private ownership with something of the same devotion that Senator Norris has brought to the campaign for government ownership, Willkie is believed to be working out some sort of workable sompromise with the President.

Details have not been given out, but the spirit in which the discussions were approached is shown by Willkie's later statement that "the day has come for both business men and government officials to make a sincere and honest effort to solve co-operatively the problems which are seriously slowing the process of recovery, and in some situations actually causing business recessions."

Camp At Steuben To Be Abandoned By Government

By Paul May

Washington.—Only one of the thirteen CCC camps in the Escanaba area will be scrapped in the nation wide curtailment program of the Civilian Conservation Corps, it was learned today.

The one to go is in Schoolcraft County, near Steuben where it has been operating in the Hiawatha National Forest.

Schoolcraft's other two camps one near Germfask on the Seney Marsh Waterfowl Refuge and the other on a state project near Shingleton, will go unscathed.

The loss of a camp, according to a recent official estimate of camp spending, will mean a loss of about $4,000 a month in the trading area nearby. This estimate includes only the amounts spent in the vicinity of the camp, without counting the $25 a month each enrollee sends home.

Other camps in the Escanaba area are at Manistique and Nahma in Delta County, Munising and Wetmore in Alger County, Rexton and St. Ignace in Mackinack County, two at Iron River in Iron County, and one at Gwinn in Marquette County.

All these escaped the elimination program that will bring the total number of camps in the country from 1604 to 1600. The curtailment was necessitated to bring the Federal agency's expenses within budgetary limits, it was learned.

FARMERS SHOW MUCH PROGRESS

Build New Structures; Improve Equipment; Get Electricity

Farmers in Delta county are showing many evidences of progressive planning in erection of new buildings, repairing of old structures acquisition of electrical service and numerous other general improvements, acording to county agricultural agent E. A. Wenner.

During the past year, Wenner assisted 108 farmers with plans for erection of new buildings and remodeling of old structures, including barns, poultry houses, machine sheds, milk houses and silos. George Amundson, agricultural engineer, laid out plans for a complete milk cooling plant in one instance.

Six new septic tanks were installed on farms in the county during the year. In most cases the agent lays out the site for the tank and drainage tile, obtains blueprints as well as orders equipment for the tank. In one instance, considerable time was spent by the agent on a farm where bed rock came within a foot of the surface. After a number of test holes had been started a seam in the rock was found where the rock could be chipped out, saving much time and expense.

Preliminary surveys taken several months ago by the county agricultural agent have been the basis upon which ground work for the Alger-Delta rural electrification project was laid. This project, which calls for construction of 113 miles of electric power line, is the first of its kind to be constructed in the Upper Peninsula. It is expected to serve approximately 475 homes, mostly on farms, throughout the lower half of Alger and northern half of Delta counties.

BY FRERERICK GARDNER
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Industrials, led by steels, put on a burst of rallying speed at the tail end of today's stock market and definitely reversed a downward trend that had prevailed during the greater part of an apathetic session.

Gains ran to as much as 4 or more points in a few cases at the whirl-wind finish which forced the ticker tape to lag 3 minutes behind floor dealings.

There was little in the spot news to account for the belated recovery swing and brokers attributed it partly to short covering and some quick-turn speculative buying.

The "shorts" were said to have grown a bit nervous because of the feeling that, with the president's return to the White House, further administrative moves to stem receding business may be in the making.

Aircrafts were ahead throughout as talk of substantial military expansion revived thoughts of heavy government spending for war planes. Electrical equipments, farm implements, rubbers and coppers joined the forward tilt. Utilities, however, were unable to make headway and some rails lacked climbing vigor.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .4 of a point at 46.5. Transfers totalled 965,250 shares compared with 836,760 yesterday.

Steels apparently were aided by the growing belief a pickup in mill operations is likely in the near future.

Motors were backward the greater part of the day, although General Motors moved up for a net gain of 1¼ at 36 1-8 at the last. Chrysler was only 3-8 improved at 58 5-8.

Bonds and commodities were uneven and foreign securities markets failed to perform on the upside. Wheat at Chicago was down ½ to 1 cent a bushel and corn yielded 1-8 to 3-8. Cotton lost 15 to 30 cents a bale. Bar silver improved abroad, after Monday's sharp relapse, on word the president would issue a proclamation fixing the price of the metal at the end of the year and that no material change in the government's purchasing policy was probable.

DAY'S MARKETS IN BRIEF

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—

Losses Regained With Curb Upturn

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Following slow retreat for most of the session, the curb market turned upward in the final hour today, and recaptured some of its losses.

Prices were uneven at the close. Most utilities recovered fractional declines and a few closed at small net gains.

Pan American Airways finished at 18¾, up ¾; Montgomery Ward "A" 132, up 2; Electric Bond & Share 11 5-8, up 3-8; Lake Shore Mines 49¾, up ¼; and American Cyanamid "B" 23, up 5-8.

Newmont dropped 2½ to 61. Sherwin Williams, Standard Power & Light, Gulf Oil and Aluminum Co. ended fractions to a point lower.

Transactions totaled 188,000 shares against 180,000 yesterday.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Dec. 7—At least temporary suppression of the Argentine crop scare forced wheat values downward 1¼ cents a bushel today despite Argentine reports of a wet harvest.

Traders generally were inclined to await official confirmation of recent sensational Argentine crop damage reports, and meanwhile North American wheat export business came to a virtual halt. It was doubtful whether today's European purchases of wheat from the United States and Canada amounted to even 250,000 bushels.

Liverpool quotations much lower than due acted as a big weight on the wheat market here. The chief reason cables gave for the downward course of Liverpool was that reductions of ocean freight rates were asserted to have put Australian wheat into line for delivery on Liverpool futures contracts.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1 cent under yesterday's finish, December 95 3-4 to 95 7-8, May 93 1-8 to 93½, July 86 3-4, Corn 1-8 to 3-8 off, December 54¼, May 57½ to 57 5-8, oats unchanged to 1-8 lower, rye unchanged to 3-8 up, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents down.

Chicago May wheat contracts led price declines, receding to 92 7-8 cents, but recovering fractionally later.

Corn and oats sagged with wheat. Rye reflected moderate export sales to Scandinavia. Corn exports totalled but 200,000 bushels.

Provisions averaged lower, responsive to behavior of hog values and of grains.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—A moderate final hour rally helped to put the bond market on its feet today, following a slow sag through most of the session.

The shift came with a late upturn in the stock market. Most responsive were low priced rails and industrial and utility loans of speculative rating.

U. S. governments had a quiet session, closing 5-32 of a point lower to 2-32 higher.

The Associated Press rail average was unchanged; industrials gained .1 of a point and utilities were down .2. Transactions totaled $6,974,650 against $7,587,200 yesterday.

Best performers in the foriegn division were Japanese, Polish, Argentine and German issues. Italian loans were weak.

HIGHWAY FUND NOT ALL SPENT

Michigan Has $4,367,978 Still Coming from Federal Gov't

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C.—Michigan got $12,666,460 in Federal money for road and highway construction during the fiscal year 1937, but still had a balance of $4,367,978 in apportioned funds to its credit at the start of the present fiscal year, according to the annual report of the bureau of public roads, just made public.

This credit balance, while apportioned to Michigan, will not be paid out until the State presents approved plans for highway construction, and then payments will be made to finance such construction, it was explained at the bureau.

On the other hand, the President's message regarding curtailment of highway funds will not efect this apportioned balance, it was said; the curtailment, if any will be affected in funds to be newly apportioned, according to existing law, about the first of January.

Here is where the Federal highway money paid to Michigan during the fiscal year 1937 came from, according to the report:

Public Works authorizations for 1934-35, $77,369; Federal-aid authorization for 1936-38, $5-220,704; Work Program, highways, $2,938,184; Works Program, grade crossings, $3,729,933; total $12,666,460.

The "unobligated balances of funds available for allotment to new projects" in Michigan, at the start of the present fiscal year, were reported as follows:

Public Works authorizations for 1934-35, $$19,526; Federal-aid authorizations for 1936-38, $1,881,877; Works Program highways, $22,949; Works Program, grade crossing, $113; Federal aid, secondary or feeder, $778,706; Federal aid, grade crossings, $1,664,807; total $4,367,978.

ORE SEASON IS BEST SINCE 1929

Local Shipping During November Is Second High on Lakes

With a total of 62,598,836 tons shipped, the ore shipping season just closed was the greatest in the upper lakes since 1929, according to a report of the Lake Superior Iron Ore Association issued a few days ago.

During the season just closed, Escanaba shipped 3,147,977 tons of ore as compared with 2,392,958 for 1936. In spite of the increase, however, Escanaba's percentage of the total showed a slight decrease. In 1936, Escanaba shipped 5.34 percent of the ore sent from the upper lakes ports but this year it shipped 5.03 percent. This drop in percentage is due, naturally, to the great increase in all the ports over last year.

Second Best Mark

Ore shipped from Escanaba during the month just closed was 205,575 tons, or 14.43 percent of the total shipped from upper lakes ports. This figure was the second largest shipped from any port, the mark being surpassed only by Superior. During November of 1936, Escanaba handled 340,747 tons but this amounted to but 9.07 percent of that shipped from all ports.

This year's total of ore shipped from all ports, 62,598,836 tons, compares favorably with the high of 1929 when 65,204,600 tons were shipped. The low mark in shipping was in 1932, when only 3,567,985 tons were shipped.

Ore shipping figures released were as follows:

North Opposing South's Freight Rate Cut Demand

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C.—The Menominee and Marinette Traffic Bureau today joined scores of other Northern and Eastern business organizations in opposing the petition of Southern states for reductions in railroad freight rates on merchandise manufactured in the South and shipped to the North.

The Bureau, representing industries and commercial houses in Marinette, Menominee and Peshtigo, told the Interstate Commerce Commission that a considerable quantity of the products of its members are shipped into the Southern states below the Ohio and Potomas Rivers and east of the Mississippi River, and that in some instances their members are in direct competition with southern manufacturers.

The products which would be affected by approval of the Southern states' request are wrapping paper, printing paper, electrical appliances, machinery, furniture, salt pickled fish, canned goods, stoves and ranges and flooring.

Northern and Eastern states and business organizations are contesting the Southern petition, claiming that the South is endeavoring to obtain a rate advantage, attract Northern businesses to locate in Southern states, and in general disrupt many northern investments.

STRUCK BY TRAIN

Iron Mountain—Nathan Kapellar, 1013 South Stephenson avenue, had a narrow escape from injury and possible death Saturday afternoon when his car was struck by the Milwaukee road's Chippewa speed liner as he was driving over the B street crossing.

Although police said the crossing signal apparently was working, Kapeller either did not notice it or disregarded it. As the rear wheels of the car cleared the rails the locomotive struck the left rear fender and swung the machine around.

Kapeller alighted unscathed and beyond a fender bump his car was undamaged. Part of his good fortune lay in the fact that the train was slowing down for the depot.

Rev. Ward Speaks

Marquette—Giving a comprehensive picture of the rugged Newfoundland and Quebec country which has been the scene of Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's work, the Rev. James G. Dr. Grenfell, who has built four hospitals in Labrador and spent the greater part of his life there in service to the inhabitants, was referred to by Mr. Ward as "one of the truly great Christian missionaries of the world."

Henry Zerbel Dies

Marquette—Henry W. Zerbel, 73 year old, retired railway mechanic and a resident of this city for many years, died Sunday evening at his home in Los Angeles, Calif., where he had lived about three years.

Born in Green Garden, Mr. Zerbel was a member of one of the county's pioneer families, his parents being among the first settlers in that farming district. He came to Marquette when he was a young man and lived in this city continuously until he moved to California. He had been in poor health for some time, but his death was not expected and news of it, which reached here yesterday morning, was a shock to his relatives and many friends.

MACHINE WILL HARVEST BEETS

Development of Labor Saving Device Predicted

BY PAUL MAY

Washington, D. C.,—The time is coming when sugar beets will be harvested by machine instead of by hand, and sugar-beet workers must face the prospect of being displaced eventually by machines, just as cotton-pickers face a similar prospect, according to a research project just completed by the Work Progress Administration.

Chief factor holding back widespread acceptance and use of existing sugar-beet picking machines is the high first cost, the WPA researchers found. The economic advantage of the machine is at the present time only a small one in comparison with hand-harvesting, the report states but it is pointed out that "the rate at which a mechanically successful harvester will be adopted will depend, of course, chiefly on the available and relative cost of labor."

In other words, evenutually sugar beet workers are going to have to work for less to hold their jobs.

Says WPA research report:

"A new machine, offering considerable promise first lifts and then tops the beets. In its present stage of development, it does work of a quality which compares favorably with hand pulling and topping. The machine lifts and tops the beets from one row, and puts the tops and beets in separate windrows. It weighs about 2800 pounds, and requires two operators and a large two-plow or three plow tractor. By means of this harvester beets can be lifted, topped, and windrowed with only 5 to 8 man-hours per acre, as compared with 20 to 30 man-hours required by hand methods. The reduction in labor is therefore about 12 to 25 man-hours per acre.

The overhead and operating costs of such a machine, at 1936 rates from $7 to $10 per acre. This indicates a small economic advantage over hand-harvesting, but not enought to cause rapid spread of the harvester, in consideration of its high first cost. Nevertheless, this or some similar harvester should find a definate place in the beet-production program where ever larger mechanical units are mechanical blocking have been introduced."

It is apparent that merely discussing peace and passing resolutions cannot preserve it.

Mink Farming Has Become Popular

Lansing—Mink farming is becoming more popular in Michigan, judging by the increase noted in department of conservation figures for fur farming licenses issued this year.

Contrasting to the gain in licenses issued to mink raisers, declines are shown for muskrat, raccoon and beaver farms. Last year 30 muskrat breeders were licensed compared to 26 this year. Raccoon raising licenses declined from 91 to 85 and beaver farm permits from 21 to 15.

The twins were the recipients of many gifts as remembrances of the occasion.

GHS Rated Class B By Athletic Ass'n

Gladstone high school during the current school year is rated by the Michigan High School Athletic association as a Class B school, rather than a Class C school which it was a year ago, according to word received by Prin. C. C. Strickland.

An enrollment of 300 is the maximum for a Class C school. Enrollment of Gladstone high from the 9th through 12th grades is 307 this year.

THEATRES

Movie fans who go today to the opening of the comedy-drama, "The Go Getter," at the Rialto Theatre, are warned by critics to be prepared for a shock right at the beginning of the picture.

The episode that introduces the star, George Brent, is a reproduction of the tragic crash of the U. S. Dirigible Macon into the Pacific Ocean a few years ago.

"Head Over Heels in Love" with Jessie Matthews in the leading role is the second feature.

WHITE PLAGUE STILL PROBLEM

Seal Sale Chairman Tells Why Funds Are Needed

"Isn't tuberculosis becoming less a problem? Is it necessary to devote as much money and effort to fighting it today as when the death rate was considerably higher?"

Questions such as these are periodically asked of Christmas seal workers, according to Mrs. John D. Staple, general chairman of the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals being sponsored at present in Gladstone by the Child's Welfare club Tuberculosis association.

"Although tuberculosis is not now the almost hopeless problem it was thirty years ago, it still needs serious consideration," the chairman said. "The fact that there are actually fewer cases ot the disease in Michigan today brings out the importance of the task ahead of anti-tuberculosis organizations," she declared.

When tuberculosis was everywhere, the seal sale chairman stated, the fight against it was like a pitched battle. One could use almost any missile, and aim in nearly any direction. Some of the enemy were sure to fall.

"Now, however, cases of the White Pleague are more difficult to locate. We must find out where tuberculosis is, and go there after it. The only protection against this insidious disease is its complete control.

"Because they provide working funds for the preventive program of the Gladstone Tuberculosis association, Christmas seals are extremely important in tuberculosis control. The seals furnish modern weapons to fight the White Plague."

Shopping worries stop, Christmas joys begin on this page

Christmas Bargains Advertized in Press

The Escanaba Daily Press publishes today another of its widely distributed Christmas Shoppers Editions.

In addition to the numerous news features and special articles following the Christmas theme, practically all of the major stores in the city set forth in their own advertisments an array of Christmas gift merchandise and things for the home and for the Christmas dinner which about covers the whole gamut of human needs or desires.

If kindly old St. Nick proposes to load his sledges here he will not be at all perplexed over the letters he will want to answer. Never have the stores offered a greater varity of gift merchandise or a more dazzingly brilliant display of toys, games, and adult adornments and "Christmas presents" than during this season. Merchants bought heavily, many of the stores reporting stocks greatly in advance of the stocks carried the last several years. Prices are reported to be most favorable in nearly every line and the great strides which have been made in new packaging and new designing tend to make each gift shine brighter and belie the price which was paid for it.

"Old Fashion Christmas"

"It looks like an old fashion Christmas," one prominent merchant declared. "There's snow on the ground and there's Christmas in the air, everywhere. Some years it just seems that people can't get themselves into the spirit of the holidays until almost the last minute. This year, however, the volume of early shopping has been very large and the interest the adults are taking in toys presages a most happy and hilarious holiday for the youngsters. If the kiddies must get down on the floor and play with the toys for the amusements of their fathers, brothers and grown sisters the way our sales people have had to—we can see a lot of fun all round, this Christmas. We've enjoyed it very much. Nothing really pleases us much more than to see a dad come in, just bubbling over with eagerness to try the mechanical toys, look through the picture books, pick up and lay down game and toy after game and toy, and then go over to look over stockings, underwear, caps, mitts and all that sort of thing. He's not only happy that he can again have something like a normal family Christmas, but he's discovering that what money he has will stretch a long distance this year and buy a great lot of fun and of practical, needed family merchandise. It also indicates that there is going to be a very widespread Christmas giving again this year. Substantial home gifts are being picked out too—things like furniture, refrigerators and radios, washing machines and similar things. In addition to exchanging smaller gifts among the group families seem to be sharing the cost of buying one big long lasting gift for the home or the whole family. Sales in these lines are reported well above last year."

Club Funds Out

Only a little less than a hundred thousand dollars will be distributed in Escanaba this week by the banks to folks who have taken advantage of the Christmas Savings clubs "painless" scheme for getting Christmas gift money. Some folks keeu up these clubs to get their tax money or to insure their fuel supplies, but they are a small per cent of the whole number who keep up Christmas Savings club deposits through the fifty weeks before each Christmas. Most of them have saved specifically to have money to buy the things they want to give for Christmas. They don't have to disturb budgets or savings accounts or pay checks. They can keep an even keel, and let the Christmas check take care of the whole business of exchanging gifts with members of the family, relatives, business associates and friends, and putting a plump bird on the table on Christmas Day surrounded with viands which have become associated with this ancient family feast. For the most part the Christmas checks are considered Christmas money and likely will be spent for Christmas merchandise.

STATE'S PARKS ATTRACT MANY

9,528,578 Persons Visit 55 Units During Past Season

Attendance at Michigan's state parks this season closely approached the all-time peak, final figures now show.

A total of 9,528,578 persons visited the 55 parks during the "open" season. The highest previous record was 9,634,701 persons clocked as park visitors in 1931, according to the Department of Conservation.

Park attendance figures reflected improved business conditions. Attendance this year was approximately three-quarters of a million more than in 1936. Improved parking facilities for automobiles in a number of the state parks also have attracted large numbers of visitors.

Grand Haven State park, with 1,744,235 visitors, was most popular with out-state and Michigan visitors during the 1937 season. Bay City state park was second with 1,540,602, Holland third with 1,306,225, Muskegon fourth with 463,150, W. J. Hayes state park fifth with 332,745 and Island Lake sixth with 285,265.

Hurley Stars As Eskymos Trim Kingsford, 29-22

CROWD WATCHES SPEEDY BATTLE

Forward Scores Total of 17 Points; Reserves Win By 28-22

Led by dark haired, hard working Gordon Hurley, who slipped in six field goals and five free throws for a total of 17 points, an alert Escanaba high school basketball team defeated a snappy passing and hard fighting Kingsford team, 29-22, before a large crowd at the junior high last night. In a fast preliminary, Coach George Ruwitch's reserves beat the Flivver seconds, 28-22.

The feature game started out to be a complete rout with Escanaba leading 11-0 at the end of the first quarter but Kingsford rallied and the game turned out to be one of the best games seen on the local floor in a long time. Kingsford, displaying a nifty passing attack with a fast break, was unable to get going in the first period but set such a fast pace that the Eskymo offense went into high gear right away. In spite of their failure to score a single point, the Flivvers were far from being outclassed and the Eskymos were kept going at top speed.

Hurley got off to a good start in this period, scoring six points on two field goals and two free throws. Other points were made by Frederickson, Abrahamson and Eis.

Get First Points

The Eskymos continued their attack in the second period, scoring ten points and Kingsford broke into the scoring for the first time. Their first point, several minutes after the start of the period, was a field goal from under the basketby D. Merzlak. The latter contributed another field goal a few minutes later on a one handed toss from the right of the basket. Abrahamson contributed two neat one handers in this frame.

The locals started the third quarter with three reserves, Swanson, Bennett and Olson, who had gone in near the end of the second period. Although they played well, Kingsford started hitting the hoop and Nordberg sent his regulars back in. In this period, Kingsford made five points in a row before Hurley came through with a free throw. K. Merzlak tossed in a one hander from the side for Kingsford and Eis closed the scoring with a free throw, giving Escanaba a lead of 23-12 as the third quarter ended.

Play Is Fast

The final period was fast and wild at times. Wild passes were intercepted on a wholesale style by both teams as they sped up and down the floor. Although Kingsford, led by the two Merzlaks, who scored all the 10 points, outscored the Eskymos in this period, the locals were never in real danger, the narrowest margin being seven points. The Flivvers lost the services of Alaspa, regular center, who was sent to the bench with four fouls with four minutes remaining in the final period.

There was a world of difference between the play of the Eskymos last night and in the opener against Marquette and last night they looked as though they may go places this year. While Hurley sparked the offense, all of the Nordmen acquitted themselves very well.

The little German band of the high school again entertained the crowd during intermissions. At one time, they staged a "sit down strike," playing their instruments while sitting on the floor. The crowd, in a peppy mood all night, was entertained by the antics of the musicians.

The Eskymos will play their third game in a week Friday when they entertain Iron Mountain.

AUBURN OKAY, SAYS BACHMAN

Jack Meagher's Outfit Best in South, State Coach Believes

East Lansing, Dec. 7 (AP)—Coach Charley Bachman of Michigan State college hailed the choice of Auburn's gridiron warriors as Orange Bowl opponents for his Spartans today.

Bachman declared Auburn, coached by Jack Meagher, his old teammate at Notre Dame, has "the best team in the south."

"Auburn has been defeated twice and has three ties against it, but that need not fool anybody," the Michigan State mentor observed. "They have five rousing victories to their credit and they were strong in defeat. A few breaks the other way would have given them a much better record."

Bachman ordered his squad to report for light workouts Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, but he announced that intensive drill would be deferred until after the team heads southward for Miami, December 21. He had planned to resume workouts, the first since the regular playing schedule ended with a victory over San Francisco, November 27, in Demonstration Hall but winter sports have crowded the Spartan football team outdoors and he deemed strenuous scrimmage on a snow-covered field inadvisable.

Bachman said he would devote some time to polishing up the forward passing attack that was the chief weapon in State's offense during a season that was marred by a singel defeat. Blocking also will share the Spartans' attention. New plays designed for Auburn will be reviewed next week.

The State coach said his squad would be at full strength for the post-season clash save for Tommy Gortat, veteran lineman, who is nursing an old knee injury. He declared none exhibited a sign of over-confidence.

Cadet Rules Will Comply With Other Schools, Colleges

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 7 (AP)—The U. S. Military Academy today changed its eligibility rules for varsity athletics to make them conform with the rules at the Naval Academy at Annapolis and the "leading civilian colleges in the country."

The change would make Army rules comply with other colleges in permitting varsity athletes only three years of collegiate playing eligibility. Up to now, Army has permitted any student to play three years for West Point varsity teams, regardless of the number of years the athlete has played in other colleges before coming to West Point.

Major General William D. Connor, superintendent of the academy, made the announcement, which ends the eligibility rules that caused Army's famous "break" in athletic relations with the Naval Academy in 1928 and 1929.

"Hereafter, the eligibility rules which obtain at Annapolis and the leading civilian colleges in the country," said General Connor's announcement, "will be applied in determining that eligibility of cadets to play upon the athletic teams of the Military Academy."

New Year's To See 5 Big Bowl Games

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Five post-season "bowl" games, all to be played on New Year's Day, have been scheduled so far. The contests and contestants:

Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif.—California vs. Alabama.

Sugar Bowl, New Orleans—Louisiana State vs. Santa Clara.

Cotton Bowl, Dallas, Tex.—Rice Institute vs. Colorado University.

Orange Bowl, Miami, Fla.—Auburn vs. Michigan State.

Sun Bowl, El Paso, Tex.—Texas Tech vs. West Virginia.

SPILLING the DOPE

BY JOHNNY INKSLINGER

After acting as though it preferred to play Amherst or Johns Hopkins, California winds up with a representative and worthy opponent in the Rose Bowl, January 1.

The current and young Alabama varsity may not be the equal of two or three of its predecessors which appeared at Pasadena, but it's a determined and well-drilled team, and the Tuscaloosa tribe's nickname, Red Elephants, always was a misnomer.

Alabama was California's second choice, but what institution in need of funds wouldn't want $110,000, which should be each club's share with the top tariff jacked up to $5.50?

—o—

California handled the situation all right once it settled down to inviting, but the pre-bid talk on the golden slope did the football department of the Tournament of Roses no good.

While the Pittsburgh players were fed up, the statement by California officials that they'd like their opponents to wear the cloaks of appropriate scholarship rating, undoubtedly had some bearing on the Panthers' refusal to make the trip to the coast.

It was reported that President Robert Sproul of California attempted to coax Dartmouth into making the junket.

To be sure, there always is Fordham, but when Pittsburgh rejects a highly remunerative pigskin appointment, Grade A bowlers are becoming scarce.

—o—

California's demanding some learning in the other corner was commendable, but a school about to drag down $110,000 for participating in a commercial venture miles from its campus, shouldn't be too choosy. It can't expect to collect that kind of kale on a strictly amateur basis.

It is Alabama's fifth trip to the Arroyo Seco, and the Crimson Tide has yet to be repelled. Under Wallace Wade, Alabama repulsed Washington in a thriller, 20-19, Jan. 1, 1926. It tied Stanford, 7-7, one year later, and Wade's finest job at Tuscaloosa crushed Washington State, 24-0, Jan. 1, 1931.

Frank Thomas was in charge of the Alabama squad that passed its way to victory over Stanford, 29-13, three years ago.

After watching erudite Alabama ramble through the 1937 season of upsets without a setback, southern observers are at a loss to figure out just where the strength of the precise, never-give-up array lies.

Attendance At Football Games is Improving

BY BILL BONI

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Football attendance figures, rising steadily since the depression years 1929-1932, continued on the upbeat in 1937 despite twin handicaps of a business recession and bad weather in the climax stages of the season.

Statistics on home games of 75 representative colleges and universities in every section of the country, as furnished to the Associated Press, show a four percent increase in attendance and receipts over 1936. The survey disclosed 7,744,803 fans witnessed 387 games, compared to last year's attendance of 7,613,768 at 397 games.

This year's average attendance was 20,010 per game, while the 1936 average was 19,178.

Though the rise from 1936 to 1937 suffers by comparison to the 15 per cent climb from 1935 to 1936, it is noteworthy because many colleges, particularly those in the east, were severely hit at the box office by weather conditions on the last four Saturdays. In spite of this damper on some of the year's biggest games, the east as a whole showed a one percent increase over 1936.

The Atlantic seaboard schools were last on the sectional list. Joint leaders were the south and southwest, where hot conference competition helped boost attendance 16 per cent. Whizzer White and his mates at undefeated Colorado helped jack up Rocky Mountain figures 14 per cent. The mid-west and far west game next with six and five per cent, respectively.

The far west and mid-west, as in 1936, were tops for individual game attendance. A turn-out of 1,310,271 customer for 41 games gave the Pacific Coast an average attendance of 31,958. In the middle west the average was 25,745, based on 68 games that drew 1,750,665 fans.

Schools drawing the greatest number of fans were:

In the east: Yale, 250,000 to seven games; Army, 248,300 to seven games; Pennsylvania, 243,000 to six games; Pittsburgh, 241,000 to six games.

In the mid-west: Ohio State, 274,432 to five games; Minnesota, 250,000 to five games; Michigan, 220,000 to four games.

In the south: Tulane, 143,000 to seven games; Duke, 129,000 to four games; Louisiana State 119,186 to seven games.

In the Rockies: Denver, 78,197 to seven games; Utah, 67,970 to five games; Colorado U., 46,145 to six games.

In the far west: Southern California, 337,000 to seven games; California, 263,000 in six games; U. C. L. A., 215,500 in six games.

Yale, drawing more at home than at home and away combined in 1936, had the first sell-out in the bowl since 1929 for the Dartmouth game, and helped pack Harvard's Soldiers field for the first time since 1931. West Virginia university had a 125 per cent rise in receipts, 52 per cent in attendance. Ohio State's home-game total fell off, but the season total of 399,683 set a new all-time high despite a crowd of 9,000 at Chicago.

Pittsburgh, to make up for last New Year's Day's Rose Bowl receipts, showed a 57,000 increase in home game attendance.

TUNNEY VOTES FOR SCHMELING

German Will Get Title Back by Knockout, Says Ex-Champ

BY GAYLE TALBOT

Summit, N. J., Dec. 7 (AP)—Gene Tunney came out from behind his favorite double shelf of Shakespeare today and predicted that Max Schmeling would win his heavyweight championship back from Joe Louis next June by a knockout.

Gene, who retired undefeated to his books and travel nine years ago, was mightily impressed by German Max's form as he worked out at Madame Bey's training camp for his bout at the Garden next Monday night with Harry Thomas of Chicago.

"He could knock out Louis tomorrow," he declared after watching Schmeling maul two sparring partners. "Louis is out of shape, and Max there has the greatest right I ever saw on a heavyweight.

(Some roughneck in the background suggested huskily that Gene must not have seen Dempsey's right the night of the "long count" at Chicago, but Tunney either failed to hear him or chose to ignore the remark.)

Springs Surprise

"There's no reason why Max shouldn't be the first man to win the title back, even if he is 32," Tunney continued. "Bob Fitzsimmons won the championsmhip at 35, and I hadn't reached my peak when I retired at 30. I'm sure of it, because I was better in my last fight against Tom Heeney than in any other."

Tunney's visit to the camp was quite a surprise, as he has studiously avoided them since his retirement. Madame Bey, who knew him "when," was as excited as Christmas morning, and insisted on setting out the best silverware for his lunch. He was accompanied by Max Brand, another writer.

Gene crowded into the little gymnasium just like anybody else and posed amiably with Schmeling for the photographers He watched the Teuton closely, particularly after he had finished boxing and was doing some strenuous calisthenics on his back.

"He's in marveolus shape, and he has a wonderful heart," he said. "This is the hardest part of all—that mat work after you've finished boxing. It takes a strong heart. Nobody has ever accused Max of being a great boxer, but he has plenty of everything else. He'll beat Louis."

Pep Session Held For Flivver Game

A basketball pep assembly sponsored by the Athletic association with Warren Olson as announcer, was held Tuesday morning at the Senior high school for the game with Kingsford last evening.

Warren asked Meyer Stein to act as master of ceremonies by calling Ann Wollen, Bob Coan, and Bob Boyle, who is the basketball athletic manager, to the microphone to answer questions. The German band composed of Don Petersen, Ken Buckland, Charles Thatcher, Bob Amundsen, and Willard Hulin with Jack Etenhofer director, amused the students. Elroy Andrews, Alta Grodeski, Lawrence Bjorkquist, Gerry Wurth were also called by Stein to render their opinions and to answer his questions.

George Ruwitch, coach of the reserves, was introduced as the main speaker of the assembly. After his speech, the cheerleaders led the group in yells. Charles Thatcher closed the program by leading the student body in school songs.

Basketball Entry Deadline Is Near

Basketball players are warned that the dead-line for league entries is getting closer. League play is scheduled to start next Monday, Dec. 13. As yet there is plenty of gym space and time to accommodate several more teams, but, when all gyms are filled to capacity, no more team entries will be accepted. To the Liberty Loans go the honor of being the first team to organize for what looks to be a very successful season.

Kalamazoo Teachers Play Irish Tonight

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 7 (AP)—Western State Teachers college basketball team will get its first big test of the season Wednesday night in a game with the Notre Dame cagers at South Bend.

Major Leagues Split On That Rabbit Ball

BY EARL HILLIGAN

Chicago, Dec. 7. (AP)—The National and American leagues, which used the "rabbit" baseball through their "boom" 1937 campaigns, split wide open today on the kind of ball they will use in 1938.

The National circuit voted unanimously to use a slower, more heavily covered ball next season, and less than an hour after this action was taken the American league decided to retain the faster pellet which it had used many seasons and which the Nationals had used for four years.

The American league action was taken soon after it was learned the National league had voted for the "dead" sphere and the quick junior circuit decision in favor of the faster ball was seen as the possible beginning of a "feud" between the majors over types of balls to be used. Previously, it was reported, the American league had stood 6-2 in favor of the slower ball.

The new National league ball, technically known as the No. 4 ball with five strands in the seams instead of four, is expected to result in a year of improved pitching and tighter games in the senior circuit and another of long distance blasting and wide open tilts in the American league. The powerful world champion New York Yankees led the movement for retention of the livelier sphere.

The last time both circuits used different balls was in 1933, when the National clubs performed with a No. 5 ball, even slower than the one they will use next season. The ball the American clubs will continue to use is known as the No. 3 type. The separate actions were seen as a virtual "switch of horses in mid-stream" as the National league's 1937 attendance was higher than any year since 1930 and the junior circuit also reported a big increase in attendance.

"The new ball will give the pitchers a better grip," said Ford Frick, National league president, "but it will not impair the possibility of long hits if the ball is hit right."

It was learned senior circuit officials, in deciding on the slower ball, were hopeful of reducing the number of "cheap" homers and scratchy hits off good pitches made with the lively sphere. In the 1938 world series, the ball used by the home park team will be used.

Other action by the American league included acceptance of the National league's recommendation that the all-star game be held in Cincinnati next season. The American league also voted to continue paying umpires to work spring training series games and to continue its $500 award to the junior circuit batting champion.

The National club owners voted renewal of Cincinnati's application for seven night games in 1938. The American league previously had turned down Cleveland's application for night dates.

The "ivory" trade market, one of the dullest in years, hit a new low. Vice President James A. Mulvey of Brooklyn departed for the East, putting a fresh damper on the now faint report that the Dodger pitching star, Van Lingle Mungo, may be traded. Several possible American league trades, involving Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, fell through as numerous managers packed bags to leave before tomorrow's joint session of the circuits before Commissioner K. M. Landis.

The circuits jointly may discuss the ball question and while it would be possible for either league to rescind its action of today, this possibility was deemed extremely unlikely.

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP)—Facts and rumors from the major league baseball meetings:

Facts

Majors split on lively ball issue, National adopting heavier cover "dead" ball and American retaining same "lively" ball used in 1937.

National League okayed Cincinnati request to play seven night games again in 1938.

American League voted to continue annual $500 award to its batting champion, and to assign all umpires for spring exhibition games involving its clubs.

Both leagues voted to work with minors for big celebration of baseball's centennial in 1939.

Pittsburgh signed Fritz Stevens, lefthanded pitcher of the Spencer Coals, Chicago semipro team.

Boston Bees sold Shortstop Lou Menendez, with Columbia of Sally League last season, to Indianapolis of American Association.

Chicago White Sox and Washington fail to agree on deal, White Sox demanding First Baseman Joe Kuhel and Infielder Buddy Myer for First Baseman Zeke Bonura and Infielder Lou Berger and Washington sticking out for straight swap, Kuhel for Bonura.

Rumors

Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo is all wrapped up and ready for delivery to Pittsburgh.

Pitcher Buck Newsom, traded to St. Louis by Boston, will after all stay with Browns.

RAPID TO PLAY LITTLE GIANTS

Old Rivalry to Resume Friday; Both Teams Look Powerful

Rapid River, Mich., Dec. 7—One of the oldest athletic rivalries in Delta county will be renewed here Friday night when Rapid River high school cagers will entertain the Little Giants of Rock in a game that is expected to draw a capacity crowd.

In a rivalry that dates back to 1928, the two schools have met in games which have turned out to be classics in many instances. Although the locals have been able to defeat Rock only four times in that time, twice in 1929 and twice last year, all the games have been closely contested and well attended.

This year both teams appear to be on the upgrade after several mediocre seasons. The locals, under the direction of their new coach Eero Wiitala, former Northern State star, have displayed plenty of power in disposing of Harris by a score of 36 to 15 and in losing to Gladstone, 38 to 25, last week. In the latter game, the locals played Gladstone on even terms for almost three-quarters before succumbing. There is plenty of height in the team composed of Lamberg, Nelson, Boyer, Short, Ebbeson, Carlson and Thompson.

Rock gave a good account of itself in the opener Friday by defeating a strong Nahma high school five, 24 to 19. The Little Giants, under Coach Clifford Buckmaster, are on the way back after a very lean year last year. In the two Pilons, two Carlsons, two Peltonens, Trombly and Luttio they have a veteran crew that may be expected to give the locals trouble.

The Rapid River schedule is as follows:

Dec. 10—Rock.
Dec. 17—Cooks.
Jan. 14—Trenary.
Jan. 21—Nahma.
Jan. 25—At Harris.
Jan. 28—At Stephenson.
Feb. 2—At Rock.
Feb. 11—At Nahma.
Feb. 15—Stephenson.
Feb. 18—At Cooks.
Feb. 25—At Trenary.
Mar. 5—At Manistique.

1,000 FARMERS SETTLE DEBTS

FSA Adjustment Work Is Reviewed By Supervisor

In Michigan nearly 1,000 farmers made settlement of their debts during the past two years, with the aid of Farm Debt Adjustment supervisors, county rehabilitation supervisors, and farm debt adjustment committees, according to a report received from Roswell G. Carr, state director of the Farm Security Administration, by Lee Stewart, rural rehabilitation supervisor for Delta County.

The report indicates that since the program began in the fall of 1935, 959 cases were settled. Prior to adjustment the total indebtedness of these farmers was $1,881,545, or an average of $1,961 per farm, and through the help of the voluntary committees this indebtedness was reduced 27.4 per cent, or about $538 per farm.

"In a large majority of the adjusted cases," Mr. Carr said, "refinancing was involved and this resulted in the payment of many old debts. The Farm Security Administration supplied loans for 524 of the cases which were refinanced. The Federal Land Bank, local banks, and individuals provided the loans for most of the remainder.

In commenting on the farm debt adjustment work, which together with rural rehabilitation loans, form an important part of the Farm Security Administration's activities, Mr. Carr added, "The FSA's rural rehabilitation division cannot be considered entirely a credit agency, because in addition to the loaning of funds the program involves improvement of farming practices, through farm management supervision and the keeping of farm and household accounts and budgets.

"In working out the farm plan, on which rural rehabilitation loans are based, it is often found that the prospective borrower's indebtedness is too high to ever permit repayment," he continued. "Local voluntary Debt Adjustment committees work with the creditors and farm debtors to bring about a settlement suitable to all."

This debt adjustment service is available not only to borrowers of the rural rehabilitation division of the FSA but to all farmers, Mr. Carr said. Farmers desiring aid may contact the county rehabilitation supervisor.

Talk On Labrador Feature Tonight At Recreation Center

Adults are cordially invited to attend this week's community night at the City Recreation Center this Wednesday beginning at 7:30, to hear Rev. Ward deliver a talk on Labrador.

Rev. Ward spent several months in Labrador where, as the only white man for many miles around, he acted not only in the capacity of minister, but, doctor, lawyer, health officer, policeman, and judge. Upon his return he was asked to talk about his experiences, and his talk proved to be so interesting that he was asked to deliver it in several Upper Peninsula towns on more than thirty different occasions.

This treat is a feature of the Wednesday night program at the City Recreation Center which is called community night and which assures the adult of an entertaining program.

Community Sing At Annex Tonight

There will be a community sing and social recreation party at the Webster Annex tonight beginning at 8 o'clock. Bevier Butts, city recreation director and Wilfred Dupont, WPA music specialist will be in charge. All adults are invited.

Sometime during the evening a discussion will be held as to desirable recreational activities for the adults to be sponsored in the Annex. So far this year there have been few attending older than the early twenties, but the older people are going to have a chance to say what they would like to do and every effort will be made by the city and WPA recreational staff to give them the opportunity. The city director of recreation is especially anxious to have as many at this Wednesday night party in order to know what activities can be added at the Annex which will appeal to the married men, women and other adults in the area, and requests the cooperation of as many as find it possible to attend.

Community Chest's Advantages Listed For Newberry Lions

Newberry, Dec. 7—H. S. Dolittle, superintendent of the Negaunee schools, was the guest speaker for the Newberry Lions club at their dinner meeting held Monday night in the Community building, speaking on the value of the community chest. Mr. Dolittle titled his talk, "Substituting Sense for Sentimentality in Community Giving." Having been president of the community chest council for his city for more than eight years, the speaker came to the Newberry group with a large fund of knowledge and experience and was able to meet all phases of the local problem with an understanding valuable to his listeners. About forty members attended the meeting at which the president, Herman Kunert, presided.

Advantages and disadvantages of the one drive method of meeting community charitable and philanthropic needs were listed by the speaker. Among the former were the following: it means a saving of effort; it is efficient; it is good economy; it commands the respect of the community; it is an intelligent expression of social service and improves the quality of that service it is a safeguard against exploitation, and it is deserving.

Disadvantages listed were as many and included the following: It lacks emotional appeal and makes charitable giving impersonal; it is vulnerable to sales resistance and tends to create an undesirable rivalry; it depends upon equitable giving, making it impossible for one phase of community giving to be expanded even though those in charge have special interests, and it is difficult to arrive at a satisfactory allocataion of funds among the recipient agencies; and last, and most important to many, it constitutes a planned economy. The speaker was listened to with much interest by the group. For many years there has been a strong feeling among many here that such a plan should be undertaken and this meeting was planned with the feeling that this might be the beginning of such a program.

W. B. A. MEETING

This car in turn rammed one belonging to Leonard Davis, causing $225 damages, and the Davis car skidded into one owned by Norman Losey, damaging it to the extent of $15 or $20. Harkness was arrested by state police from the Newberry post, arraigned before Justice W. J. Stephens of Manistique and committed to jail, being unable to pay the fine of $25 and costs. His companion, Victor Swanson, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was held to sober up before he was arraigned.

The Yule Sing

A JIG-SAW CHRISTMAS ROMANCE

By MARTHA BANNING THOMAS

Caroline told herself a dozen times a day that she did not care whether she heard from Stephen or not. What possible difference could it make now, after all these months of silence?

And here it was Christmas eve. Not a message! Not a card! Oh, well . . . she turned away from the window. One must not allow one's self the luxury of regret.

Fires burned brightly on the hearth. Holly hung above the mantel. Show outside, cheer within. That was all she required. She hummed a tune in false gayety.

A ring at the door. Stephen? No, just a messenger boy with a box. Caroline's fingers crackled the red cellophane unwrapping it. No card. Just crazy dozens of jigsaw pieces.

She walked restlessly about the room. Then she returned to the box. Black and white pieces only. Idly she fitted a few together, leaned closer and frowned. Familiar hand-writing. Stephen's hand-writing!

Excitedly she bent above the puzzle fitting the rest together. Gradually Stephen's clear strong writing stared up at her.

"Dear Caroline," it read, "if you have the patience to put this together, I shall know you are still interested in me. I could not tell you what I wanted to, before I left, because I was not sure of circumstances. But now I know. I can take care of you. Will you marry me, Caroline? A yes would be the most marvelous Christmas present in the world. I love you. "Stephen."

She laughed a little. She cried a little. Then she went to the mantel and snatched down a photograph of herself. This she cut up into small jagged pieces. On several she wrote a single word, which, when put together, read: "I have gone all to pieces, missing you." Then on the mouth of her pictured face, she added the single word "Yes."

These pieces she quickly wrapped up in the box sent to her, and dispatched it by a messenger, who admitted that a gentleman had given it to him, who was staying at the Inn in town.

In another hour Caroline was not alone with her bright fire and holly. And Christmas eve was what it should be. Stephen declared he had been too scared to come himself and sent the puzzle as a test-case. Then he kissed her.

Through the Clouds and in Time for Christmas

The plane, "The Betsy Lee," had climbed to 10,000 feet. The man at the controls peered through the misted glass at the dense bank clouds ahead. He had already encountered one squall, and there was a coating of ice on the wings.

Should he turn back, and take the train that would get him home too late for Christmas? Then he thought how disappointed Lucy and the kids would be. Christmas without Daddy. He squared his jaw and muttered: "Bill Parker, you're no quitter; Betsy, we are going through!"

He grasp the stick with a steady hand as the bank of clouds loomed closer, and plunged into them.

The wind tore at the plane, causing it to zizag crazily and it took all the strength of Bill's iron muscles to prevent a tailspin. Rain and hail fell in torrents, with an occasional flash of lightning piercing the inky darkness.

"What a storm to fight!" If he could climb high enough he might get above it. The roar of the engine answered, as he opened up the throttle, and the plane began to climb. Twenty thousand feet, the instruments registered. The storm was still with him. Five thousand more—he felt dizzy and numb. Then a lull as the plane roared into a calm, moon-silvered night.

Bill pounded his numb hands. "We're going through, Betsy, old girl, but it was close to 'Another plane crashed' headline. We missed the front page but we'll soon be home."—Jocile Webb Pearson.

CLUE TO PRESENT FOR MYSTERY FAN

As to the dective story fan, the danger of giving a book that has already been read is probably greater here than anywhere else, so you had best confine yourself to detective stories that have just been published. As a general thing, you can't go wrong on anything written by such people as H. C. Bailey, Erle Stanley Gardner, Van Wyck Mason, Leslie Charteris, Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, R. A. J. Walling or Richard Hull.

A CHRISTMAS AWAKENING

BY KATHERINE EDELMAN

"With Christmas drawing near, why can't we get together and make plans—" Robert Dutton read no further. With calm deliberation, he put the heavily scrawled letter back into its envelope.

"Always the impractical Hal," he said slowly. "No wonder he never gets anywhere."

A list of appointments waited upon his desk. Visits from two of the most important men in town; a delegation about a right-of-way through a tract of land he had just purchased; a reminder of a talk he had promised to make at a luncheon. Important things, he thought, things Hal would never be called upon to do.

Hastily he went through his mail. A square envelope in a familiar hand caught his eye. He opened it a little curiously. What could Miss Denby be writing him about? His long fingers drew out an artistic Christmas card. A conservative wish and an old Christmas carol printed in English letters. That was all, except the signature, "Eleanor Denby."

A flush stained his face, an undefinable something sent the blood singing through his veins. "Eleanor," he said softly; "a beautiful name; how queer that I never heard it before."

Then, as if resenting his weakness and sentiment, he dug into his mail again. But try as he would, he could not concentrate on the things that had meant everything to him before. Something had happened to Robert Dutton; a Christmas greeting from a secretary when he had scarcely noticed left him visibly unsettled.

Christmas memories surged through his heart. He was back in the old home again. Everybody was rushing around in circles. He saw the big tree in the corner of the parlor; the kitchen table piled high with good things to eat. And Mother and Dad, with happiness beaming upon their faces.

He picked up Hal's letter again. After all, may be his kid brother was so crazy? The thought was pushing through his mind that maybe it was he who lacked real sense. This time he read the letter in a different mood. "Let's give Dad and Mother the surprise of their lives. Let's go down and make one grand Christmas for them. You can turn everything over to someone else for a week—anyone can handle things like that—there's nothing personal or precious about them."

"Nothing personal or precious about them!" He turned the words over in his mind. Hal was right. Someone else could handle the things that had seemed so terribly important. A few hours of confusion, perhaps; then things would go on as before. The world would forget him in a day.

His fingers reached for the pen upon his desk. "Dear Hal," he began, "I heartily agree with your proposal that we get together and make plans to give Dad and Mother the biggest surprise and the grandest Christmas ever—" He was smiling broadly, almost laughing aloud, as he finished the letter with a flourish.

Five minutes later Miss Denby entered his private office to find a new Robert Dutton. She almost dropped her book in surprise at the expression upon his face, and the new way in which he greeted her.

"I'm ready to begin, Mr. Dutton," she began nervously, when he made no motion to start the routine of the day.

"We're going to forget business for today, Miss Denby, and go Christmas shopping, that is, if you want to help me out." He fumbled with his tie as he spoke, noticing for the first time the soft curving of her white neck. "Your Christmas card," he went on "wrought some miracle. I've found out that business and making money isn't everything in life. They're both fine in their way, but there are other things, too; precious things that I've been overlooking." He came closer to her side and looked hard into her eyes. "For instance, going shopping with a good-looking and adorable secretary."

As Little Santa Claus Canary Was a Success

With Christmas so near and no money for a gift for Nedda Langley, his sweetheart and inspiration for composing, and now this cold rainy day, Carl Woods felt very low spirited.

Then he saw the little bird outside the window. He opened the window—the bird flew in and perched on the piano where it seemed quite at home. Standing by the piano wondering what to do with his visitor, Carl let his fingers wander over the keys. "Tweet tweet" the bird said and then began to sing lustily. Intensely interested, Carl continued playing and as long as he played the bird sang.

Suddenly realizing he was playing something he had never heard before, Carl began making note of what he had been playing. Growing chilled, he arose to close the window he had left open. To his surprise, the bird was gone, nor could it be found in the room. He couldn't remember when he had just heard it sining. Where could it be?

Looking across the court of the apartment building he noticed in the window opposite, a bird cage and a canary was hopping around on the window sill. Although the window was closed now, it must have been open earlier and the bird had taken advantage of its freedom.

Whether it was the same bird that had visited Carl, he and Nedda always felt it was and called it "Little Santa Claus" for it had brought happiness and prosperity, for Carl's composition was accepted and an advance payment made.—Blanche Tanner Dillin.

Lights Tell of Yuletide Joy

The beauty of this house is brought out by outlining the details with festoons of lights. The wiring is concealed by evergreen roping. Six lighted trees and candles in the windows add to the blaze of light.

If you want your holiday house to look as though it belonged on a Christmas card, have it alight within and without. Somberness has no place in the gayest season of the year.

The principle idea in outside Christmas lighting is to make the most of your house. Women with imagination no longer string colored bulbs on a front yard spruce and call it a Christmas. They are mixing imagination with lighting—and the result is as charming as a Walt Disney version of Christmas.

If you live in a house with gables, try outlining the gables and corners with lighted festoons. Strings of outdoor lights are used for this purpose, and if you wish, the wiring of the lamps can be concealed by evergreen roping.

A simple way to light a whole house is by hiding a few flood lights behind shrubbery, and directing them toward the house, whose windows are made gay with holly wreaths.

Holly wreaths are significant as well as beautiful when shaped in a triangle, the points of which represent the Trinity. The center o the triangular wreath is round, signifying the interminable circle of eternity.

Holly on Table For Centerpiece

A holly wreath makes a beautiful centerpiece for the Christmas table when candles are set in the wreath itself and lighted.

If you are giving a Christmas party put a holly boutonniere for each guest on a silver tray in your entrance hall, and see that each person who enters your house wears a spray.

Bringing out the beauty of your house as a decorative scheme applies to the inside as well as to the outside. A built-in bookshelf, a small table in the hall or living room, or a mantle can be made a Christmas beauty spot.

You'll want a tree, of course—whether there are children in your house or not—and you might try lighting it with a combination of amber, yellow, and white bulbs. The effect is beautiful and a pleasing change from the conglomeration of all the rainbow hues used for so many years. And do have it near a window, so that passers-by can share its beauty.

White or Silver Decorations

Or you might prefer a snow-white tree lighted with all blue bulbs and hung with real pine cones which have been silvered (you can easily do it yourself) with aluminum paint.

Pine cones, left their natural brown, can be used effectively with holly and branches of any kind of evergreen. A mantle banked to the ceiling with pine branches seems to bring Christmas right inside a living room. Red candles in brass candelabra make a bright spot against such a background of greenery.

If you have money to spend you can buy decorations for making your home gay for the holiday season. But if money is limited you can work out you own decorations — just as gay — with very little cost, and with much real fun. Most of us never get too grown-up to get a kick out of planning and working to make the Christmas season the gayest, merriest, brightest time of the year.

BELLS OF CHRISTMAS

BY JOCILE WEBB PEARSON

Tom Madsen sat beside the fireplace and gazed moodily at the blazing logs, as the sparks spiraled upward. Outside flakes of snow beat against the window pane to the chime of the church bells ringing peace and good will to all the earth.

"Peace," Tom muttered. "Was there such a thing on earth? Not for him, anyway." He had staked everything on his boy. Been both father and mother to him—given him the advantage of the best schools, with a law partnership waiting for him in his office; and what did he get? "Sorry to disappoint you, Dad, but I don't seem to be cut out for law. Sally and I want to find happiness in our own way. I mean to buy the old Wormley farm and Sally and I will be married there, in our own home, Dad, on Christmas eve."

Young Tom had choked a bit as he saw the look on his father's face—"I'm sorry, Dad; I do appreciate all you've done for me, 'but the hand writes and moves on,' and it's all settled. Be a good sport, Dad, and come to our wedding and give us your blessing." But he had turned on his boy. "Never!" he cried. "See my son married to a cheap dancer; a common"—Young Tom's face was white. "Stop, Dad, or I might forget you are my father"—and he had rushed out of the house.

That had been three long months ago. An eternity for him. He had been too hasty; had been governed by his prejudices. One couldn't measure the present generation by the one of his day. Tom, Jr., was no fool; he should have trusted him to do the right thing; what right had he to interfere; to say how any life should be lived?

Suddenly he wanted to have a share in the joyfulness. He reached for his hat, but remembered it was too late for shopping, but there was his check book. What if Tom refused his tardy offering? The eager look died. There was a loud ringing of the door bell and the sound of rushing feet—the door was flung open. There was Tom, looking just like he used to when he came to him for comfort. "Dad, we just have to have you. Sally sent me to bring you. It's Christmas." Tom, Sr., held out his arms. "We won't disappoint Sally, son."

CHRISTMAS at the HOMESTEAD

BY AGNES MYERS

"The doorbell, Amanda! It may be the man with the hobby-horse," cried Natalie Parker, as she gathered up a confused heap of Christmas ribbons and gay colored wrappings strewn about the sitting room.

There was a sound of quick stamping and crunching of boots on the scraper. The old servant opened the front door and a man set an enormous package in the hall, said something about the blustering snowstorm and was gone.

As the woman carried the package in to Natalie, a chirpy sound of funny little tinkling music issued from the bulky bundle. Her black eyes snapped with delight as she cut the heavy cords.

Out tumbled a hobbyhorse, a handsome fellow with a leather bridle; a white, woolly lamb with button eyes and a bell on his neck; a long-eared rabbit with a perky tail; and a queer little whimsical top that seemed to laugh with merry music every time it was moved. There was a wispy angora cap just big enough for a baby, and a tiny white muff, oh, so little, of real fur with a tippet to match.

Amanda gasped! "All 'em Chrismas gifs! No one cep'in you, Mis Natly, would ever think of sech things! I jes hopes 'em Harlow chillun 'preciates the—the—" but her voice wavered. The sleeve of her alpaca frock brushed across tear dimmed eyes as she picked up the crumpled brown wrappings and fled from the room.

Early next morning Natalie settled back in a train for a five-hour ride, her heart brimming with happiness.

Many changes had come over the young girl's life. Edith, her older sister, married Arnold Harlow and lived in Hillsboro. Her house adjoined the lovely old rambling stone homestead where Benjamin Parker, a widower, lived with his daughter Natalie and the faithful Amanda. When Mr. Parker passed away Natalie closed the house and went to teach kindergarten in Boston. Amanda went with her.

The train dashed along through a whirling snowstorm. Deep in the tender mood of reminiscent reverie, Natalie fell asleep.

"Hillsboro! — Hillsboro!"

She awakened with a bound. Clutching her grip, a box of barley candy, and almost dragging the cumbersome and unwieldy pack, Natalie, still half asleep, stepped out at the very end of a long frosty platform.

A tall young man in a big fur coat was waving good-by to someone on the train as it pulled out. In his excitement he took a long, free stride backwards on the platform and crashed into Natalie.

The two went down in the drifted snow in a heap. The cord broke on the big bundle. Helter-skelter the multitude of Christmas gifts scattered in every direction.

They looked at each other in blank astonishment—then amazed recognition.

"Why, Natalie Parker!" gasped the dumbfounded youth.

"Bruce Draper!" — exclaimed the bewildered girl, actually spellbound.

From somewhere in the snow came the sound of queer little rippling music. They looked at each other again with wide open eyes, then burst into rollicking laughter.

They gathered up the wayward toys and Bruce loaded them into his car. With the girl beside him, a triumphant smile played over his face, and they talked excitedly as the motor raced over the hills.

"Mother and Aunt Em just left for grandfather's farm and I'm going up tomorrow, but now tell me about yourself, Natalie."

"Bruce, surprises are so much fun. Edith doesn't know I'm coming."

Natalie got a real surprise, however, in a few moments, for no one was home at her sister's house. After repeated ringing and pounding, she looked at Bruce in dismay.

Her eyes wandered toward the Parker home.

"Oh, Bruce! I have the keys of the stone house! Let's go over and build a fire; we can at least keep warm until they come."

With logs from Harlow's woodpile Bruce soon had a roaring fire romping on the hearth. They stood before the flames, the girl's blond hair like an aureole of gold framing her face; the man, tall and bronzed, alert and capable.

"Let's look through the house," suggested Natalie, leading the way.

At the turn on the stairs there was a wonderful beehive window on the landing, and a friendly window-seat. They lifted the lid. Many things were stored in the seat.

"What's this box? Candles!—Christmas candles!" called out Bruce. "Let's light up the windows!"

Back down stairs they dashed and soon the rambling stone house was a glitter of lights. Bruce went over to Harlow's to get some more logs, and returned with the wood and a package.

"Natalie, somebody delivered these holly wreaths at Edith's; I found them at the back door. We'll put them in the windows. Ho, ho! —What's this? Mistle toe, too!"

"Here's a footstool, Bruce; tack it on the hall arch."

With a flutter of ecstasy Natalie looked up smiling, but the firm face of Bruce Draper wore an expression of grave appeal. With a combination of strength and tenderness he took her in his arms.

"Dear Natalie, this mistletoe is a symbol of the plighting of love's troth." His voice trembled.

There was a moment of silence, a moment of mutual confidence and understanding which had been almost instantaneous. Her blond head rested in the hollow of his shoulder. Through the half-closed eyes warm tears gathered—his words clung to her senses like a benediction.

CHRISTMAS ON SMOKE CREEK

BY THOMAS TAYLOR

There was not to be any Christmas tree at the little church at the head of Smoke Creek that year; and of the several families who lived there, not more than half were expecting Santa Claus. The dark days had left the dismal little valley or hollow even more gloomy than it had been in better years, when the mines across the ridge in the next hollow gave some employment to the heads of the families of Smoke Creek.

Jim Knox, who lived at the very head of the stream, was perhaps the most unhappy of all in the little "settlement." His wife and only child, a son of seven, had died, and his nearest neighbor was Joe Hathway, a bitter enemy with whom he had had many difficulties. So that lonely night of Christmas eve as Jim sat before the open wood fire, with the light of blazing hickory logs his only company, he was not without fear for his own safety—he knew Joe Hathway had threatened his life.

As he sat dreaming his eyes happened to rest upon his rifle standing in the corner of the log room. "That gun or Joe Hathway's will some day tell the tale," he said to himself. He meant that one day, like so many others down the lonesome stream, either he or Joe would go—and using a common mountain expression, "with his boots on." He did not care much if it should be himself; life had come to mean but little for him.

While Jim was thus dreaming, Joe Hathway sat in another log cabin but a few yards down the stream. By chance Joe's attention was called to a book on a shelf. The school teacher had given it to his daughter who had died from the epidemic on the creek. The title appealed to him—"The Christmas Carol." He took the book and began to read. Page after page and chapter after chapter, he read on. It was the first book Joe had ever read. It filled him with new visions and new ways of thinking. He read on till midnight and had been so impressed that he decided to read a chapter from the Bible before going to bed. By mere accident the chapter was one on the birth at Bethlehem. Its teaching overpowered him—he had found the more abundant life.

On Christmas morning when Jim Knox went out to the spring for a pail of water he noticed something like a card tacked on Joe Hathway's door. He saw no smoke from the chimney. Taking in the water, cautiously he approached Joe's cabin door, and read the note which said:

"Dear Jim: You will find me gone. I was reading some last night in 'The Christmas Carol' and in the Bible. I read that verse that told of peace and good will to man. Said to myself. 'My family is all gone—the last was Mary. She left the book to get me on the right track. There's nothing in this hollow for me any more. Maybe I can find work by New Year's over on Cedar Creek.' You and I never could get along. So to make things better for us both hereafter I am leaving at daybreak. And Jim as I say 'Goodbye,' I also wish to say, 'Peace on earth good will to men'."

And as another result of "The Christmas Carol" two mountaineers were better men, and though they had no Christmas cards or presents, and no holiday programs, the pines on the hillsides seem a bit greener and the music of the streams seemed sweeter.

J. Cronin; Night at Hogwallow, by Theodore Strauss; Their Eyes Were Watching God, by Zora Neale Hurston; Salute to Yesterday, by Gene Fowler; Pity the Tyrant, by Hans Otto Storm.

A CHRISTMAS RECONCILIATION

BY HELEN WATERMAN

Mary and John had quarreled—just before Christmas, too. The Christmas candy had burned, and then, in the excitement, each had blamed the other, making cruel retorts, until Mary fled to her bedroom in tears and John stalked off in the snowy night.

The Christmas candle beamed a welcome from the window as John started around the block again. He was cold, and sorry, but he mustn't go in too soon.

The tree, the holly, their little girl asleep in her crib and dreaming of Santa Claus—all were a mockery. Mary went into the living room and snapped on the radio, looking for a jazz band and forgetfulness. Instead there came the strains of "Silent Night"—"peace on earth, good will to men,"—God bless us, every one"—"may nothing you dismay." Wasn't there anything on except Christmas programs? A click brought back the silence.

She opened the front door. Next time she would ask John to come in. Tell him she was sorry. Now that she stopped to think, she knew that he was sorry, too. Why let a few excited words that neither of them meant spoil their Christmas?

But John did not come. It was too cold to stand at the door any longer, but she sat at the window, with the curtain drawn aside, watching for him. An hour went by.

When at last she saw him coming the relief almost choked her. He was striding rapidly, carrying something in his arms. She opened the door for him and he handed his burden to her.

"Here, Mary, hold him. Careful, now. His leg's hurt. I'll get a box and we'll fix a bed."

Mary looked down at the warm bundle. It was a furry puppy. One leg was in splints. The puppy whimpered a little and licked her hand.

"But, John, where did you get him?"

"Accident. Over on Linden. Fell out of a passing car. I took him to a vet and had him fixed up. Thought he'd make a cute pet for Alice—" He stooped his work and straightened up. "I'm awfully sorry, Mary. I was a fool."

"It was my fault, John." Their eyes met in perfect understanding. How silly to quarrel. The silence was a more impressive reconciliation than words. Mary broke it nervously, for fear she would cry again. "There are some clean rags in that drawer. And we ought to get him something to eat. He can have this old bowl for his dish." She worked with one hand, cuddling the puppy. "Won't Alice be surprised? And what shall we name him?"

"Ought to have some connection with Christmas eve, don't you think? How about Scrooge, or Marlow?"

"Oh, no!"

"Good King Wenceslaus?"

"Such names for a poor innocent puppy! Maybe we had better see what Alice wants to call him in the morning." She put the puppy down with a saucer of warm milk. John came and put his arm around her, and they stood close together watching their pet lap greedily.

"We ought to call him Peacemaker, honey," said John. "If it hadn't been for him, I might have still been out there in the snow."

"Oh John!" She held him close. "Weren't we silly? I was so worried when you didn't come. If anything had happened to you I could never have forgiven myself."

"Felt pretty rotten myself. Not my idea of the best way to spend Christmas eve."

"Of course! I forgot! We have so much left to do! The tree, and Alice's doll must be unpacked, and her stocking filled. What time is it?"

He looked at his watch. "Almost midnight."

"Not really!"

He nodded, and put his watch on the table. "Here, pooch," he said, "it's bedtime for you." He lifted the puppy into its bed, and turned back to his wife. "And as for you, milady," he said, "in about ten seconds I want a kiss for Christmas, and then we're going to pitch in together and clean up this mess, and trim the tree, and maybe even chance another batch of candy. OK? Then, it's time, darling, to say Merry, Merry Christmas."

CHRISTMAS AND HOW

CHARM OF CHRISTMAS

The chief charm of Christmas is its simplicity. It is a festival that appeals to everyone, because everyone can understand it. A genuine fellowship pervades our common life—a fellowship whose source is our common share in the gift of the world's greatest Life which was given to the whole world.

Believe Animals Fall on Knees

A superstitious notion prevails in the western part of Devonshire, England, that at 12 midnight Christmas eve the oxen in the stables always fall on their knees.

Toyland Is a Busy World

Authentic household equipment for tiny housekeepers includes: a washing machine, folding iron board and clothes line on which to hang the freshly ironed garments, carpet sweeper, dolls' high chair, electric stove on which a child really can cook.

BY MARIAN YOUNG

New York—With the toys he gets for Christmas this year, a child can build a world of his own. Santa's pack will be filled with toys and games with which a youngster can build and do—not just gaze at, then store away on a high shelf.

Child play, 1937 style, features skyline building and the mysteries of science as well as up-to-the-minute technique in transportation, scientific baby care, art and handicrafts.

The G Man, the engineer and the cowboy vie with cartoon celebrities and Hollywood stars for first place in the list of playroom heroes. Dolls wear replicas of the smartest juvenile fashions (in contrast to uniformed dolls still sold abroad). Children's drawing books reproduce peaceful activities in American industry and homes.

"Because autos, radio and movies have given children broader experience today, they are sticklers for toys which reproduce newest adult designs," says the head of a large toy concern. "By increasing the purposefulness of playthings, their imaginative appeal, educational value and variety have been greatly increased. Also, former luxury toys have been copied in low price ranges for the first time."

Scientific Marvels to Thrill Boys

New thrills for Junior include a television telephone—a trick done with mirrors; ABC blocks with grooved surfaces that guarantee tip-proof towers; a gun that shoots pictures on the wall.

A miniature reed organ boasts three and four octaves. There's a new road construction set complete with "Men Working" signs.

Tiny steam engines whistle and chug when you plug them into a wall socket.

Electric train marvels that used to be exclusive with model makers are being turned out by mass production. New trains whizz along at 100 miles an hour—to scale, of course.

The first miniature polariscope gives playroom citizens a chance to test light phenomena. A unique micro projector produces brilliant explosions by magnifying the reactions of such household staples as lemon juice and soda.

Modernistic houses with geometric lines and broad expanses of glass are new arrivals in 1937 toylands. Youngsters can build their own bungalows and tourist camps. Trailers have doubled auto production; wheel toys boast stream-lining, chromium trims, push button horns and electric headlights.

Old favorites—marbles, kazoos, circus toys and such — still hold their own, however.

Girls Gifts Have Domestic Appeal

Little girls want dolls just as they always have. If you gave Mary Dionne quinttuplet baby dolls in a basket last Christmas, she'll love little girl quintuplet dolls this year. The quins have grown, you know, and so have quin dolls.

Shirley Temple and Jane Withers dolls are adorable.

And some pert little mites, designed for children by children, are dressed in gayly printed cottons and hair ribbons to match. A new drinking doll can consume the contents of her bottle while sitting up. Press her stomach and she moves her legs.

A play stove on which a little girl really can cook never gets hot enough to burn her fingers. A whistling tea kettle holds two cups of water, starts whistling as soon as the water begins to boil.

SEEING THE WORLD BETWEEN COVERS

For people who like arm-chair travel (or, for that matter, the other kind of travel), writers have prepared a number of welcome gifts:

Crossroads of the Buccaneers, by Hendrik de Leeuw; I've Been Around, by Claudia Cranston; Panamexico, by Carveth Wells; West Indian Odyssey, by Charles P. Parmer; Off With Their Heads by Wolfgang von Hagen; Petticoat Vagabond, by Neill James.

A Happy Christmas

Unloving indeed must be the heart that cannot offer and respend to that universal greeting, for Christmas is the time beyond and above all others when we should forget all differences and disagreements and quarrels. Serious though we may have hitherto thought them, shall we not put an end to them as the Yuletide greeting rings in our ears, "A Happy Christmas!"

A Nice Christmas Gift, Thought Happy Marilyn

Although he lived across the hall, their acquaitance had been only a bowing one until he had reminded her that morning in the elevator there were only three days more until Christmas. A welcome announcement for any employee in Baxter's store, she thought.

She hadn't known his name until his sister spoke to Marilyn Marsh just as she was putting her key into her door that evening. Mrs. Hunt, Wade Kendall's sister, as she introduced herself, was having difficulty with some decorations. Would Marilyn help her? Marilyn did, in spite of preferring to rest after her day's work at Baxter's. Wade came while they were working with the decorations, and soon conversation turned to what plans each had for Christmas day. Mrs. Hunt would be with the Kendalls for the family reunion. Wade would not be though because business prevented. Marilyn had no plans, so Wade suggested they spend the day together.

Christmas day, Wade learned that Marilyn had been forced to give up her music instruction and was employed otherwise; he had guessed that, he said. The music he used to see her carry, he noticed she never had with her now. Too, he had seen her in Baxter's—and he had told his sister that anyone who could rise above dispointment and keep as cheerful and friendly as Marilyn, was an inspiration, and worth knowing.

That was the best gift she had received, she told him. She hoped to be an inspiration always. His eyes and lips told her she would.

HOLIDAY STOCKS NOW DISPLAYED

Merchants Prepared to Serve Crowds During Christmas Sales

The spirit of Christmas descends, full force, on Escanaba today as this issue of the Escanaba Daily Press ushers in the last two-week period during which Christmas shopping is done in earnest.

This edition brings to thousands of Press readers a large list of advertisements, telling of the wide selection of quality holiday merchandise offered to shoppers from Escanaba's extensive trading area.

For the convenience of Christmas shoppers, Escanaba's more than a mile of modern retail stores will remain open evenings beginning on next Thursday, December 16. Those who are unable to do their buying during the day will be able to visit the stores in the evening to make their holiday purchases. Stores will remain open until 9 o'clock from December 16 until Christmas eve, when they will close at 6 p. m., in order to allow employes an opportunity to enjoy the holiday event.

Holiday Spirit

Christmas shopping this year is an exciting adventure. Even the hardened individual who during the lean years was wont to describe Christmas as "just another day," after a few glimpses of stores and shop display windows, and further investigation inside, is developing holiday spirit over night and getting busy with gift lists.

The beautiful and unusual in gifts, this season have a note of practicability and doubles their appeal and a range in selection that assures buyers of the satisfaction which goes with just the right gift. In the department of the staple choices, which find their welcome way into Christmas stockings each year, the selection is larger than it ever has been and the styling, and smartness of every detail, makes just buying them a pleasurable event.

Right Prices

Added to this is the almost unbelieveable fact that all of these gifts(lovely and practical, are available in price ranges that fit right in with large purses or small purses, and that everywhere in Escanaba's big shopping district, are enlarged sales forces, the personification of helpfulness and courtesy, to aid shoppers during regular hours, or during the extra evening shopping time, which goes into effect this coming week.

SOMETHING NOVEL IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS

People who like fiction, but like it moderately refined and free from rough stuff, ought to be happy if one or more of these novels find their way into the Christmas stocking:

The Enemy Gods, by Oliver La Farge; They Seek a Country, by Francis Brett Young; Rumbin Galleries, by Booth Tarkington; Sun Across the Sky, by Eleanor Dark; The Running of the Deer, by Dan Wickenden; War With the Newts, by Karel Capek; Greathouse, by Edward Eyre Hunt.

The Faithful Wife, by Sigrid Undset; Summer Moonshine, by P. G. Wodehouse; Eternal Flight, by Lotte Lehmann; Tomorrow the Accolade, by Janet Deitrick; The Merry, Merry Maidens, by Helen Grace Carlisle; Forgotten Lady, by Norval Richardson; The Picnic, by Martin Boyd.

Big Christmas Stocking

Christmas Poinsettias Popular Holiday Plant

The brilliant street lights of a large city were flickering into the cozy front apartment of the Malory sisters. They were sitting alone on Christmas eve enjoying their snow white tree gleaming under its burden of blue electric bulbs in true modern fashion.

"Oh, dear," sighed Lois, "doesn't Christmas always remind you of poinsettias?"

"Sure does," replied her sister, wistfully. "How could we ever forget them? Remember how mother used to send us out in the sleigh to deliver those scarlet beauties to our friends, every Christmas? Those were the good old days!"

"Wasn't it fun, though? I can just see the dear old home simply loaded down with the 'Christmas stars' as we used to call them."

At this very moment several blocks down the street the telephone was ringing profusely in one of the busiest florist shops on the avenue. An order was being placed for the largest and very best poinsettia plant in stock. It was to be delivered to the Misses Lois and Mae Malory, on Rugby street.

Just fifteen minutes later the door bell at this residence rang and a messenger delivered the gift beautifully wrapped and tied in Christmas colors.

"Oh, Lois, come quick!" shouted Mae. "A gift from the home town. What can it be?"

"Why, it's a pot of poinsettias—one mass of crimson stars! Who could have sent it?"

When they discovered the card, it was more puzzling than ever, for the only inscription upon it was, "Poinsettias For Christmas."

"The Cooky Lady" and Tim's Christmas Letter

Patsy liked to take her doll out in the sunny kitchen and watch Ann, the cook, roll out the cooky dough and cut round moons; then put them in a long pan ready for the oven. When they came out all smelly and warm Ann would put some on a paper plate for Patsy to eat. Ann had the nicest dimples when she smiled, and Patsy would smile right back at her and say: "Thank, you, Cooky lady."

Sometimes there were brown cookies and fruity ones, too, but the red and green candied ones that Ann made for Christmas were the very best of all. Patsy adored Ann. Through the seven short years of her life she had been her constant companion. Mother was just the lovely lady who was always busy with her clubs and going places, and Daddy was too busy at the office to be bothered much; but there was always Ann.

Patsy liked the nice postman, Tim, who came to see Ann and sometimes they all went to the movies together. Tim could play "pretend" almost as good as Ann. But once she heard him call Ann his best girl, and say: "Some day you're going to cook for me." After that she did not like him so well. Things seemed all wrong, and Santa hadn't answered her letter, and it was only two days till Christmas. She had said: "Please write soon," and that had been days ago. He must help quick, or it would be too late. Several times a day she would go to the mailbox and stand on tiptoe to look in for fear her letter had been overlooked.

"Here, Tim," said one of the office clerks, "is another of the kid letters to Santa Claus: guess this one's up to you." Printed in a childish scrawl on the envelope, Tim read: "Santa Claus, care of Tim." He drew out the folded paper. It read: "Dear Santa, please bring Tim another best girl cause Ann has to cook for us."

"Your friend, Patsy Reynolds."

Tim stared, then chuckled: "Santa, old boy, you're up against it this time."—Jocile Webb Pearson.

Plan Christmas Dinner

Plan to prepare as much of the meal as possible on the day prior to Christmas so that the housewife can enjoy the day with her family.

THEIR LUCKY CHRISTMAS

BY LUELLA B. LYONS

Jack and Ellen Dyson couldn't find a thing for which they could be thankful and merry this Christmas—Jack out of work and Ellen with so little in the house left for meals. But to make matters worse, shortly after Jack left, Ellen missed the emerald setting out of her ring. She hadn't worn it for a long time but it had been her greatest consolation—if the "worst came to worst"—it could be sold.

"Five presents here and they aren't from the five and ten, either, Jack! I know, you took my emerald to buy these, didn't you?"

"You honestly think that of me, Ellen? If that's the way you feel, all right, think what you please!"

Neither of them realized that they were hardly accountable for their mutual lack of understanding. Tears fairly blinded Ellen as she went out to bring in the little red hen, the last member of their little flock. She kept thinking that at least this, her last offering to the holiday dinner, was honest.

Then suddenly she caught sight of the familiar emerald—there in the little red hen's insides was hidden the gem she had thought poor Jack had taken. In a moment she went to her knees before her husband.

"Forgive? Why, Ellen dear, it certainly did look bad for me, no wonder. If I'd not been a stubborn fool I'd have gone on and explained myself. You see, darling, on the street today I found a packet of bonds and when I returned them to their owner, he gave me twenty dollars as a reward and a job!"

Even an old grouch would have had to grin had he seen Jack and Ellen then join hands and dance about in their joy for a merry, lucky Christmas!

More Than A Mile Of Retail Stores Are Stocked For Christmas

A Sign in the Sky Was A Christmas Time Cross

Well, Ratty, we'll be handing ourselvee a grand present by this time tomorrow."

"Yah, I don't hanker after the job. Somebody in this home-town of mine might get wise to me."

"Scared? You been away ten years doing time. You're out now, and free. No one ain't going to see you. You can lift plenty from that house you been telling about. You know every inch of it, by your say."

"Sure I do. I lived in it for nearly twenty years."

The man beside him in the speeding car whistled. "Never knew that."

"You keep your trap shut, Slinky."

Clouds swept across the moon, now revealing it round and bright now hiding it.

"Stormy," said Slinky, "all the better for us."

They entered a broad village street. Elms lined either side.

"Right pretty, ain't it " snarled Slinky. "But too neighborly for my blood.

"Hey," cried Ratty stopping the car. "Look at the moon shining up there behind the church steeple!"

A cross of light streamed from four corners. "Nothing but moondogs."

"Shut up, you. I'm telling you something. I'm not robbing the house I was born in. I'm tough—but not that tough."

"You crawling dirty rat!"

"And I'm going to church on Christmas morning like I used to with my, my," he hesitated, "with my folks. We got decent clothes. I'm going. That there," he pointed at the streaming light, "well, for just a minute I felt like is used to feel when I lived here as a boy. I'm going, and so are you. We can say Merry Christmas then, for once, without faking it. That cross," his voice was husky, "shows me up for just what I am—a rat. You and me, Slinky, are going to be decent tomorrow." Martha Banning Thomas.

GOING INTO ACTION FOR YULE SHOPPING

For people who like action, these are gifts packed with thrills on the bookstore shelves—

Northwest Passage, by Kenneth Roberts; Death Sails With Magellan, by Charles Ford; Gone to Texas, by John W. Thomason, Jr.; The Praying Mantis, by Edgar Johnson.

Apartments in London are called flats.

Sweethearts' Reunion Under Mistletoe Twig

Betty Jane dressed carefully, wondering if college had changed Bill much. It was grand having him home for the holidays. The doorbell rang.

"Christmas gift," cried Bill, handing her a gayly-wrapped package, and taking her in his arms. Betty Jane drew back. She wasn't sure she liked this Bill so well—he seemed so sure of himself. She remembered Bill as humble, wooing for her favors.

"Come say hello to the folks", Betty Jane invited, "and see the tree and smell turkey."

They went, hand in hand. "I suppose you've met a lot of girls at college," she hazarded. "Tell me about them."

"Well, there's just one I'm really crazy about," Bill answered. "All the fellows think she's swell. Her picture's on my dresser, and whenever I'm in doubt, I talk things over with her."

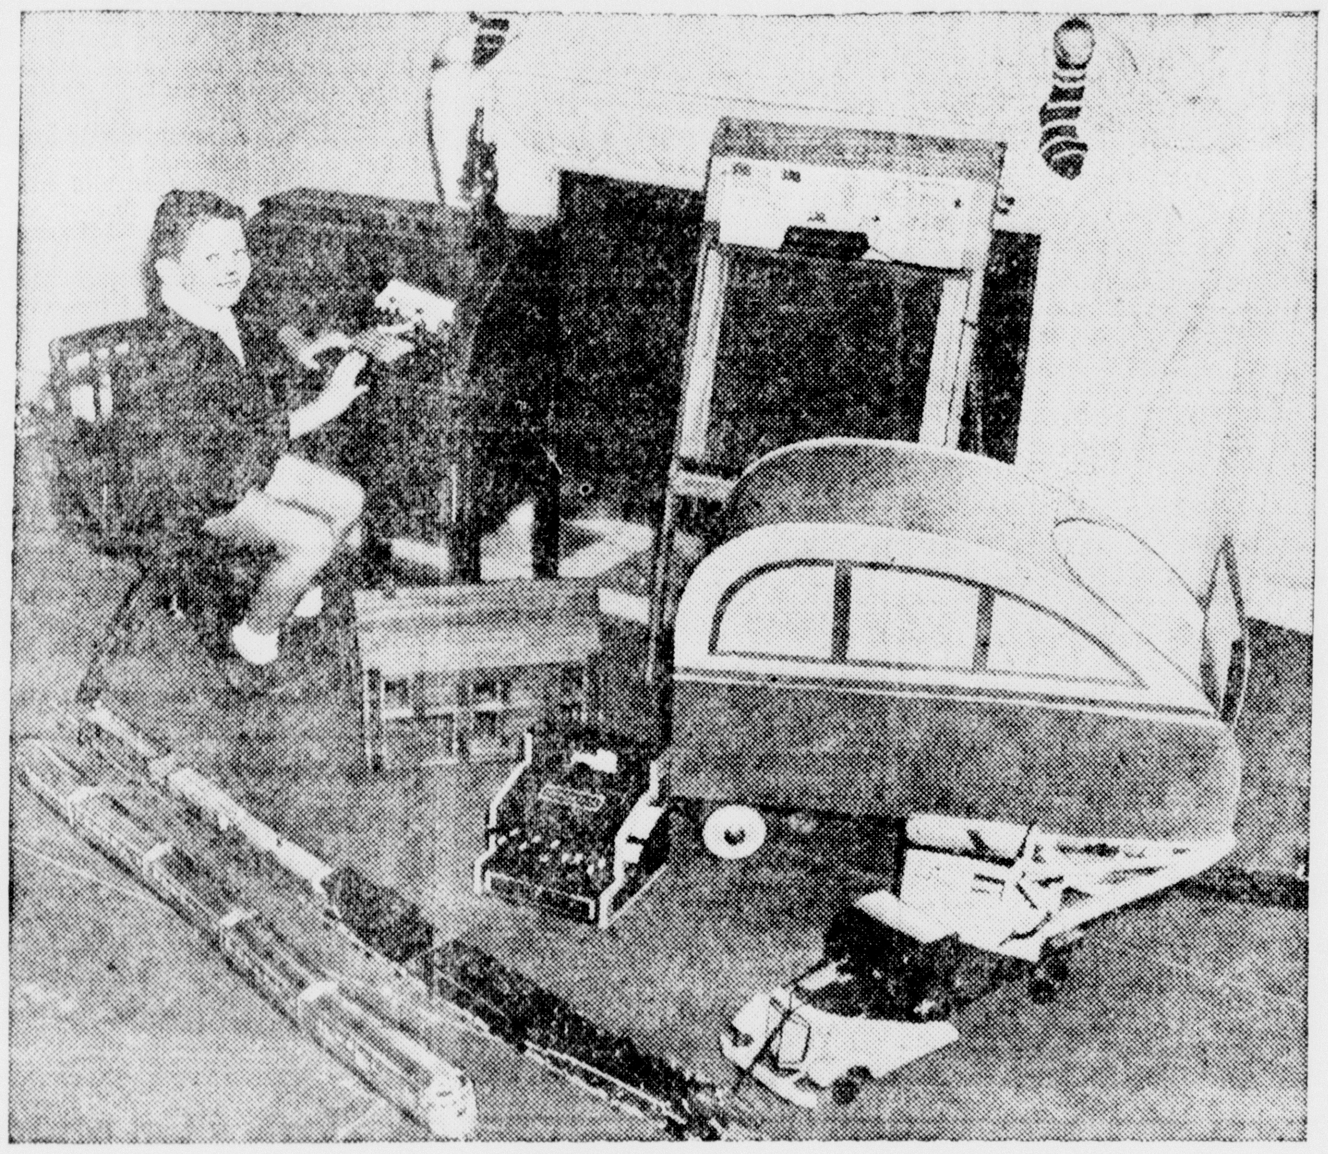
"How grand," said Betty Jane in a tight little voice. They came to the mistletoe. How different from last year, when she was just learning to love him!

"I have her picture on my watch, too," Bill went on, his eyes twinkling brighter than the silver star atop the tree.

"You used to carry mine there," Betty Jane observed, and managed somehow to laugh lightly.

"And still do," said Bill, exhibiting it. "All the fellows are jealous of the girl I left behind me. There isn't a girl in all the world, let alone college, like you, Betty Jane. And by the way, don't you know that a pretty girl should always stop when she comes to mistletoe?"—Helen Waterman.

Modern Toys Make Christmas Big Occasion For Tiny Tots This Year



Ready to write Santa a letter of thanks on his new typewriter is this happy youngster, surrounded by all his wonderful gifts. Sister can ride in his auto trailer, but he won't need help to operate his trains, or scoop shovel truck. And what fun he'll have on rainy days with his microscope, blocks and cash register.

From roller skates with noise mufflers to blackboards with electric lights, the toys, playthings and games for young Escanaba's 1937 Christmas are right up to the minute and modern in every detail.

The new chair for Johnny's roll-top desk is a swivel chair. His set of blocks will build him the smartest hot-dog stands or a rustic northwoods tourist cabin. His trains are streamlined and of shiny modern aluminum. The big trailer for his favorite automobile will accommodate little sister in its comfortable depths.

All of the playthings are adapted more and more to everyday life, patterned after grown-up things, and happily, the military toys and games are becoming less and less popular.

The latest children's gifts are pleasantly educational. The world's future scientists can get an earlier start these days if Santa will remember to bring them a fully equipped microscope or chemical set.

Tapestry and rug weaving looms will give Mary a chance to decorate her doll or playhouse. And the future businessman or author can have a toy adding machine or typewriter with real ribbon and upper and lower case, to start him on his way.

The latest construction sets, many simple enough for the very young child ,may be worked by electricity after they are set up. A new steel crane will lift cargo from a toy dump truck, and a big toy steam shovel can be made to lift dirt by itself, or with just a little guidance from Junior. The future civil engineer may start building roads out in the back yard with the new steam shovel or roller.

Magic Guns Shoot Pictures

Building blocks come in such a variety of styles that 6-year-olds will find themselves building modern houses on the nursery floor or setting up a log cabin of interlocking timber logs out under the trees.

A new magic gun, a sort of cross between a movie camera and a telescope, shoots pictures on the wall. And there are several stereo-picture books for youngsters, most popular of which are the one on ships of all sorts and ages, and one on zoo animals. Lenses to look at them come tucked into the book.

Educational toys cling to their popularity. One of the newest is a young artist's etching set, with drawing board, plates and tools.

A scout box with knife, flashlight and compass will be a favorite gift for the 12-year-old. There is also an electric semaphore toy, to teach the scout beginner the wig-wag system, merely by touching a contact key to the letter he wants signaled.

Games for Rainy Days

Junior will be delighted to be able to play football in the house on rainy days, and mother will be pleased to know that it's only a game in which light ping-pong balls "tackle" the men in the line-up, suspended on wires across the playing box.

A miniature badminton set is also a welcome gift to mother on a rainy day. It consists of a narrow net set up on two standards in attic or recreation room, and the birds and racquets are similar to those for the regular outdoor game.

The world's greatest actor (to be) will like a make-up box with false whiskers, false noses and ears, and other disguises enough for a Sherlock Holmes. Boy and girl both will delight in a marionette theater and even make the puppets themselves. The newest children's theater features puppets with a patent controller that makes it possible to operate one puppet with each hand. A book of playlets comes with each theater, and all sorts of puppets, for all sorts of stories. Red Riding Hood and the Dionne babies, and a dozen others, are available.

Dolls of All Descriptions

The quintuplet dolls have grown up to big little girls now, and any girl will love to have a replica of her favorite "quint," with her name embroidered on her dress—or all five, if she is lucky. They are dressed in costumes like the "quints" newest clothes.

Countless other dolls, some in the latest smart clothes, some in native peasant costume, with darling individual faces, await sister on Christmas morning. And Princess Elizabeth, with her long taffeta dress and gold tiara, is still a popular favorite, in any size.

The tiny child, too young for destructible dolls, will love a new long-legged toy lamb, in curly pink wool, or a silky spotted tiger, suave and relaxed, but looking ready to leap. And the mama of the tiny child will appreciate a high chair pad, with hand-appliqued teddy bear, or a play pen with removable, washable covers.

There is a grand baby's gift set, in a tweed utility case, lined with rubber, which holds baby pants, rubber pants, lap pad and terry cloth bib and rattle.

There are fat little "boo-hoo" and "ha-ha" dolls, all faces and heads, that will look grand in the top of the Christmas stocking. There are curlers for Shirley Temple dolls' hair, doll furniture in every style from early American through Victorian to the latest in chairs and sofas for modern apartments.

Grand are the new housekeeping toys, carpet sweepers, clothes wringers and toy irons. There's a marvelous new walking doll with no wind-up machinery, who raises her own feet when propelled from behind. Lots of dolls have new tricks; they not only drink but they cry, and their voices don't get laryngitis any more.

A grand canvas playhouse in which any child up to ten can play standing up is popular. And the greatest thing that ever happened for mothers is a Tidy Toy Truck, with lid that closes, in which Junior will delight to put his toys away, because it's like a circus cage for animals and rolls on wheels just like the big wagons in the circus parade.

Millions Of Christmas Gift Items Offered In Pre-Holiday Sales

Most Beautiful Gifts of All

What a beautiful surprise for Christmas morning! On the mantel are a comb, brush and mirror set of bleached maple, perfume and toilet water in a wine basket. On the tables are: a de luxe manicure case, perfume, a set of nail lacquers, bath and face powders, a rich night cream in a shiny black jar, a tiny makeup kit no larger than a lipstick and a novelty nail brush.

New York—Regardless of her age, size, height or weight, — no matter who she is, where she came from or where she's going—every woman wants beauty gifts for Christmas. For that matter, her brother, father, husband, children or best beau will be delighted with "beauty" aids. From a brand new perfume "to wear only with black" (for the sophisticate) to a new men's set of lotions in masculine-looking, pottery bottles, there's an appropriate beauty preparation for each person on your list.

Sumptuous and smart is a face powder ensemble, containing two shades of powder, one to be applied atop the other, and a brush to help one do the blending job successfully.

From the same house comes a truly handsome bath set, including a giant cake of soap, toilet water, bath powder and bath salts, all scented with a subtly sweet perfume. An especially generous gesture would be to include a small bottle of perfume in the same odor.

There are dozens of new perfumes on the market, not to mention all the old favorites in new bottles and packages. Three sweet little bottles are packed together beneath a Christmas bell.

A huge cake of bath soap nestles inside a Santa Claus mask. A wonderful cologne comes in a bottle which simulates a brandy decanter. A quart size champagne bottle contains cologne liquid for the bath and is packed in a wine basket. In a wicker steamer basket are perfume, a decanter of cologne, a lipstick and bath powder. Three bottles of perfume go in a small metal crate, and can be locked in.

For Grandma and Baby, Too

If she's over 40, and one of your best friends, a de luxe night cream, preferably one of the new varieties that tend to eradicate fine lines and wrinkles, will delight her on Christmas and for weeks thereafter.

Give grandmother a bottle of liquid sachet which she can apply on the inside of dresser drawers, a tall crystal bottle of lightly scented cologne, a tiny packet of four white satin sachet pillows.

Give the college girl a makeup kit, containing treatment preparations as well as rouge, powder, lipstick and mascara, to take back to school with her. Or a small manicure case with four shades of polish, so she'll have the right nail lacquer for each color in her wardrobe. Or a charming dresser set with comb, mirror and an excellent hairbrush of maple or ebony with her monogram in sterling.

Give the baby in the family a bottle of powdered milk for his bath (this makes sky-high, foamy bubbles) and a box of dusting powder with down puff. These two items are packed together in a stunning box, and the glass jar of powdered milk is tied up with pink or blue satin ribbon.

Making Hostess and Guests Happy

Practically every manufacturer of cosmetics features several makeup kits, from smallish, rather inexpensive ones to de luxe types which include enough of everything to last the average woman for months and months and months. One small flat overnight case with an extra large mirror in the cover, has space for a nightgown, toothbrush and slippers in an extra compartment between jars of creams and a big box of face powder.

It's almost impossible to go wrong on soap, particularly if you buy it from an established house. Bath cakes are larger than ever. Guest cakes come in lovely flower shapes. A woman who entertains a good deal would be pleased with tiny round cakes of guest soap, wrapped in red paper, on a tree branch with cherry leaves top and bottom. Each guest picks off a cherry of soap as he needs it.

Among the more pretentious beauty gifts are fitted evening and daytime bags. One purse comes in a variety of leathers, holds a bottle of lotion, jars of cleansing and foundation creams and has ample space for billfold, change purse, compact, note pad, pencil and so on. If she hates putting fresh makeup on over stale during the day, this is the gift she'll love.

Flattering Manly Beauty

Men, bless 'em, no doubt long since tired of getting the same old shaving preparations each and every Christmas, are going to be surprised this year. Give him his favorite shaving soap and face lotion, of course, but consider adding: a talcum in a bamboo-shaped container with a red top; a set, containing cologne, shaving soap and talcum as well as after-shave lotion and a shampoo; a cowhide humidor case. The cowhide is on a strong wood frame, the inner cover is lined with cork, and cedar compartments separate decanters of lotion and cologne, an ivory shaving bowl and a matching container of talcum.

If he travels a good deal, give him a fitted case. Or find an oil-skin-lined, unfitted case, then fill it with his favorite preparations. Travel or no, if he doesn't have one, he'd probably like a manicure set. The newest models are masculine-looking enough to please any male you know.

Anne's Christmas Bonus Was for One Good Idea

Christmas bonuses were always given in accordance to the value of suggestions written out and finally accepted at the offices of John Stone and company, and Lee Anne Foster wondered, disgustedly, why she had thought of such suggestions after other girls had already thought them up or why she couldn't think up something unusual enough to earn her special attention with the firm. There were only five more days until the yearly list of bonus recipients would be announced.

That evening, back in her own room, seated at her desk, she sat staring at the wall. She fidgeted with her pencil, almost praying for inspiration—what could she suggest to be done in the office or in the business that would increase either efficiency or business? Her eyes were staring straight into a huge pot of four-leaf clovers that she had brought back from the country when she had visited her parents on the farm during last vacation.

"The Four Leaf Clover Line"—why—why not? She jutted down the idea as it all came tumbling through her mind—in the manufacturing end of the business, create a breakfast nook or kitchen line all with four leaf clover motif, giving a cook book with its cover simply plastered with actual four leaf clovers, shellacked—a line especially to attract the newly wed trade. "Why, I could furnish the four leaf clovers for the first few books and maybe Mr. Stone would put a four leaf clover under the seal of that new style wedding certificate he gives free to each bridal pair of customers—who knows!"

Lucky for Stone and company but just as lucky for Lee Anne, for as the Christmas day bonus for her suggestion was handed to her, she also received the first such contract ever known—for all the four-leaf clovers she could grow within the next year—Luella B. Lyons.
